AWFUL SLAUGHTER IN DESTRUCTION OF CZAR'S SHIPS

7,000 RUSSIAN DEAD IN SEA BATTLE

TYPE OF JAP SEA FIGHTER.

Here is the man who did the business end of the work by which the Russian navy was destroyed—the man behind the gun.

MIKADO CONGRATULATES TOGO AND JAPAN'S NAVY

Our combined fleet encountered the enemy's fleet in the Korean Strait, and after several days' desperate battle annihilated it, accomplishing an unprecedented feat.

We are glad that, by the loyalty of our officers and men, we have been enabled to respond to the spirits of our ancestors.

Though the war be long, we hope that you will be loyal and brave, and secure a successful result.

Our navy, with the best strategy and greatest courage, annihilated the enemy's squadron and answered our hopes. We appreciate deeply your splendid success.—The Mikado's rescript congratulating Togo and the navy.

Slain in Fight or Drowned With Sinking Ships May Number 9,000 or More, and 4,000 Were Taken Prisoners—Crews Went Down With Ships Amid Scenes of Horror.

TOKIO, June 1.—From 7,000 to 9,000 Russians are estimated to have been killed or drowned in the great naval battle in the Sea of Japan. In addition to these figures, 4,000 Russians are prisoners of war.

Many bodies have been washed ashore on the islands and on the shores of the neighboring coasts near the scene of the battle.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—A dispatch from Tokio to Minister Takahira, recapitulating the results of the battle of Tsushima, says:

"Altogether, eight battleships, three armored cruisers and three coast defence ironclads, which formed the main force of the Russian fleet, were either sunk or captured, and most of second class cruisers and other subsidiary vessels were destroyed, so that the whole Russian fleet was practically annihilated."

LONDON, June 1.—A telegram received here to-day from St. Petersburg says that the protected cruiser Izumrud, which has not been accounted for since the battle, has reached Vladivostok. If the report is true, as well as the dispatches last night, this makes five vessels in all which have escaped from the Japanese. The cruiser Almaz and destroyer Grozny are known to have reached Vladivostok safely. Last night it was reported that the destroyers Bravy and Terosiaby had also reached the Russian port.

ARREST FOR PLOT TO KILL KING ALFONSO

JOURNALIST OF SPANISH ORIGIN HELD FOR COMPLICITY IN BOMB THROWING.

PARIS, June 1.—A well-known Journalist named Malato, who is of Spanish origin, has been arrested on suspicion of being implicated in the plot to assassinate King Alfonso.

To-day Premier Rouvier and M. Ritenne held a lengthy conference to discuss the bomb throwing. M. Leydet, the examining magistrate, was directed to begin a thorough investigation of the whole affair.

The plot is revealed, it is said, has involved several Spanish literary men who live in France. Four of the men under arrest have given satisfactory explanations, and, as there is no evidence against them, will be released.

The city legislature, headed by Paul Brousse, the Socialist Mayor, who recently professed that, as the "godson of the Pope," Alfonso ought not to be received with any demonstrations in France, to-day sent a letter to President Loubet expressing their indignation at the manner in which the Socialist newspapers which spreaded demonstrations against the King have attempted to disguise the outrage as of no moment because it did not result in the King's death. A significant incident is being recalled to-day in connection with the bomb-throwing. On the day Alfonso arrived in Paris the walls in the poorer quarters of Paris were covered with placards saying: "Comrades, avoid the King's passage. There is danger."

Alfonso Undisturbed.

Alfonso himself apparently has not been in the least disturbed by the attempt made on his life. He enjoyed the military manoeuvres at Chalons-on-Marne, city which he visited to-day immensely. He witnessed the spectacle from the back of a horse which had been brought from Paris especially for his use, while President Loubet remained in his carriage.

The specially by the combined military forces. First a farm was attacked, then the cavalry charged the hill while the artillery bombarded the position with blank cartridges.

Next an attack was made upon an artificial village, where a castle, church, city hall and several houses could be seen. The walls behind which an imaginary army was hidden were attacked with real projectiles.

Alfonso was an interested spectator during the entire proceedings. He followed every detail with the greatest interest.

Once he asked permission to charge at the head of the cuirassiers, but the military authorities, who feared an accident, declined to allow him to do this.

Both King Alfonso and President Loubet escaped injury, but five persons were struck by fragments of the exploding bomb and seriously injured. A horse was killed under a cuirassier, and several horses were badly injured. It is remarkable that no one was killed.

The attempt at assassination was made at about midnight. Alfonso and President Loubet were returning to the Palais d'Orsay, after attending a gala performance at the Grand Opera House, where the audience had cheered itself hoarse in its ovation to the boy ruler. Surrounded by a brilliant escort of diplomatic officials and the staffs of Alfonso and Loubet, the two heads of Governments started on their drive to the Palais d'Orsay.

Man Threw Missile.

As it neared the Rue Rivoli, with the King and President constantly acknowledging the applause of the crowds, a man was seen to suddenly spring up from the sidewalk and hurl a missile at the royal carriage.

A scene of intense excitement ensued. The police rushed for the man who threw the missile, and the crowd shrank back, instinctively realizing that the missile was a bomb. A second later came a deafening explosion, but the King's carriage had gone by, and the bomb exploded in the midst of a detachment of cuirassiers, striking one of the men on the shoulder and glancing to the ground.

Pandemonium followed. The shrieks of the injured men and horses filled the air. Reserves of police came rushing up to clear the avenue and the cuirassiers drew their sabres. The drivers of the royal carriage urged their way ahead. Alfonso's face was pale with fear of death, yet he kept his composure. Loubet also showed the strain that he was under.

City in Darkness.

The force of the explosion was such that all the electric lights in the vicinity were extinguished. The King's carriage was driven rapidly through the crowded and darkened streets to the palace, where Alfonso quickly retired. Before doing so, however, Alfonso sent a member of his embassy to ascertain the condition of the injured.

BISHOP, FRIEND OF IMMIGRANTS, DIES

ROME, June 1.—Monsignor Scalabrini, Bishop of Piacenza, who was well-known in the United States because of his efforts to better the social conditions among Italian immigrants, died this morning as the results of a recent operation for heart trouble. Mgr. Scalabrini was universally beloved, and his sudden death has plunged the whole city into mourning.

The steamer Prince George arrived in port from Yarmouth, N. S., to-day with a cargo of 125,000 lobsters and 5,000 pounds of fresh salmon.

PULLIAM SAYS M'GRAW DESERVED SENTENCE

Behind closed doors at the Hotel Touraine the Board of Directors of the National Baseball League are sitting on the McGraw-Dreyfuss controversy. It is expected that this meeting will be one of the most important held by the board. Before going into session, President Harry Pulliam stated that the meeting would not come to an end until every detail was settled. Even if it takes all night, the board will not leave the room, having their meals served there while the meeting is in session.

Neither John T. Brush nor Barney Dreyfuss will be allowed to vote, as both are interested in the case, Dreyfuss as being the complainant, and, as Brush would naturally stand up for McGraw's rights, President Pulliam says that they will be only allowed to present and argue his case. Therefore, it will be up to President Pulliam, James A. Hart and A. H. Soden to decide the case.

"The board will have absolutely nothing to do with what happened between McGraw and Dreyfuss on the Polo Grounds on May 20," said Pulliam before the call of the meeting. "The Board have been asked to hear and decide the personal charges brought by Dreyfuss against McGraw.

Dreyfuss's Charge to Be Heard.

"As to what happened on the ball field was settled by me, when I fined McGraw $150 and suspended him for fifteen days. The Board cannot readjust this penalty, as it is out of their power according to the rules of the National League. The personal charges brought by Dreyfuss will be the only ones heard by the Board.

"I have been asked why I called the meeting in Boston instead of at the National League headquarters in New York. The reason is that Mr. Soden of the Boston Club is the oldest member of the Board and I considered it as a courtesy to him that I should call the meeting here in Boston.

"Another reason for my calling the meeting here is that Mr McGraw and Mr. Brush would be here with their team, and that Mr. Dreyfuss and Mr. Hart would find it just as convenient to journey to Boston as to New York.

"When I have been asked why Umpires Emslie and Johnstone were shipped out

TOGO'S REPORT OF 2-DAY BATTLE

LONDON, June 1.—Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Ambassador here, to-day received from Tokio a copy of the seventh report made by Admiral Togo to his government in regard to the recent fighting. This report shows that the total losses of the Japanese number about 800 men.

The three torpedo boats, No. 34, No. 35 and No. 69, which were sunk, were all the war vessels lost by Japan. The Admiral says that it will be several days before a detailed report of the losses as well as of the vessels and men can be made. The report says:

4 Battleships Were Quickly Sunk.

"From reports from the various divisions under my command it appears that the Oslabia, being seriously damaged early in the battle of May 27, left the line and sank at 3 p. m. The Sissoi Veliki, Admiral Nakimoff and Vladimir Monomach suffered heavily at midday on May 25, and at night were so badly damaged by our torpedo boat flotilla that they were put completely out of action. They were discovered the next morning drifting near Tsushima by our converted cruisers Shinano Maru, Yata Maru, Tainan Maru and Sodo Maru, but went down before they could be captured, our ships rescuing 915 survivors.

"The Navarin was struck by four torpedoes and sank. The report in regard to the Jemtchug, which was previously reported as sunk, is cancelled. The fate of the vessel is uncertain.

"Regarding the damage to our fleet subsequent reports show that during the night attack of May 27 torpedo boats No. 34, No. 35 and No. 69

YOUNG SOCIETY FAVORITE HELD FOR BURGLARY

Several Mysterious Thefts in Milford, Ct., Are Laid at His Door.

MILFORD, Ct., June 1.—Archie Pendleton, a Brooklyn youth, who has lived in this section for about eight months, and who in that time has become quite a favorite in social and church circles is under arrest here, and will be arraigned for trial in the town court to-night on the charge of burglary.

Pendleton is the son of parents who are employed as caretaker and housekeeper respectively in a wealthy family here. Soon after coming here he joined the First Congregational Church.

On May 21 Clark's bicycle store was entered by burglars and goods to the value of nearly $300 taken. At the same time the clubrooms over the store were entered and some valuables taken. The authorities have recovered some of the missing goods in a Bridgeport pawnshop and Pendleton has been identified by the pawnbrokers as the one who pawned them. A number of articles have been missed in local houses who's Pendleton was a visitor.

It is also recalled that Pendleton was the young man who discovered the fire in the Congregational church some time ago and did much work in helping to extinguish it.

TO ENTERTAIN MILES

A reception will be given to General Miles by the John Adams Chapter, Junior Sons and Daughters of the Revolution, of Quincy, at the State rooms of the Bay Line Boylston street, on Saturday, June 3, from 3 to 5 o'clock.

7,000 PERISH, 4,000 CAPTURED, 23 SHIPS LOST TO CZAR IN SEA FIGHT

sank, but most of the crews were rescued. Otherwise no ship whatever was lost. The damages to the larger vessels, including the destroyers, were very slight. None was incapacitated for action.

2 Days and Nights of Fighting.

"As nearly the whole of the Japanese and Russian fleets was engaged in the battle its field was greatly extended, and the weather being misty it was impossible to see more than five miles. I was therefore unable to keep in touch with all the divisions under me, even in the daytime. Besides, the battle occupied two days and two nights, the enemy scattering in every direction, while some of our vessels are engaged in duties subsequent to the battle, so that it will be impossible to forward a detailed report for several days.

KAISER URGES PEACE FOR CZAR

ST. PETERSBURG, June 1.—Advices received here from Berlin say that Kaiser William yesterday forwarded an urgent dispatch to the Czar urging him to make peace with the Japanese. The message was followed up with a long autograph letter from the German ruler to the same effect, pointing out why Russia should give up the present struggle.

EYE-WITNESS TELLS STORY OF BATTLE

LONDON, June 1.—The first story of the battle of the Japan Sea is told to-day in a special dispatch received here from the correspondent of the Daily Telegraph.

He says:

"The combined second and third Russian squadrons arrived in Japanese territorial waters by passing through the Bashee Straits. The plan of the admiral commanding was to divide the Japanese strength at the outset, and his fast cruisers were sent ahead to scout Tsushima Strait. From the offing of Saishiutau the main Russian fleet changed its course as if its intention was to return to Bashee Strait. But at 5 o'clock Saturday morning, steaming at twelve knots, it steered through Korea Straits in a southeasterly direction toward Saishiutau, within the waters of Iki Island.

JAPS READY FOR PREY.

"At this time the Japanese combined fleet had left its prearranged base and a squadron was detached to press the Russians toward Iki Island. The Russians went full steam ahead and every ship was steaming its maximum practicable speed, affording a most impressive and majestic sight.

"Meanwhile the Japanese were lurking in the neighborhood. The Russians passed through a strong current running past Iki Island and proceeded on a due northerly course. The Japanese were ready for the fray and their auxiliary fleet to the north headed off the Russians.

"Now the great battle began. Togo's vessels manoeuvred with perfect precision and soon had the Russians enfiladed by their fire, not in the ordinary sense of the term, but in front and on both flanks. The scene, which I had the honor of witnessing, was superbly terrible.

BROADSIDES FROM FIFTY SHIPS.

"Guns of nearly fifty warships were being fired and now and again a great crash sounded as loud reports coincided. For a time the belligerents gave shot for shot and through the conflict the fleets were on the move.

"But the Russians deviated from their original course, and, with a hostile squadron on each side and another ahead of him, Rojestvensky was practically defeated within a few hours.

"There was no possible direction for him to turn, and he had fallen into the trap which had been awaiting him ever since he left Madagascar.

"Hesitation was displayed in the tactics of his fleet, and this proved to be the forerunner of utter confusion.

"The Japanese knew instantly their enemy was beaten, and the concentration of their fire now became absolutely infernal. Every gun was trained upon the Russians, who were caught in a cul-de-sac.

AWFUL DEATH REIGNED.

"Long lines of smoke, like seaclouds, floated across the water and were lighted up by flashes of artillery. When the bombardment reached its zenith every second was marked by cannonading.

"The Russian fleet slowly advanced toward Vladivostok. The Japanese squadron, lying between them and their destination, also steamed slowly northward. The spectacle was grand, awe inspiring in the extreme, and, with every breath I drew, I knew it timed the passing of souls from life to death.

"Between 3 and 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon a Russian cruiser of the Nakhimoff class and the converted cruiser Kamtchatka foundered. Previously their upper works had been shattered into splinters of wood and iron and steel, all being carried away.

RUSSIANS IN UTTER ROUT.

"Then the Russian fleet broke into utter disorder. The vessels no longer preserved their formation, but went along on a zigzag course. Some pointed their sterns to east, others to the west and at that moment it became evident Rojestvensky was completely defeated.

"The Japanese now advanced to closer quarters; the Russian ships were under a fire rendered all the more terrible by the shortened range. They no longer existed as a fleet, but were severed into a number of detached squadrons co-ordinated in no direction and utterly demoralized.

"Gradually they were pressed towards their enemy's coast of Nagoto Province."

MIKADO'S THANKS TO TOGO AND NAVY

TOKIO, June 1.—Admiral Togo, the hero of the "Naval Battle of the Sea of Japan," as the Japanese commander has designated the great engagement recently fought, and the Japanese navy have both been congratulated upon their recent success by the Mikado in rescripts issued to-day. The congratulatory rescript to Admiral Togo says:

"Our combined fleet encountered the enemy's fleet in Korean Strait, and after a desperate battle lasting several days annihilated it, accomplishing an unprecedented feat.

"We are glad that by the loyalty of our officers and men we have been able to respond to the spirit of our ancestors. The future of the war is long, but we hope that you who are loyal, brave and faithful will secure a successful result."

The Imperial rescript to the navy is as follows:

"Our navy, with the best of strategy and great courage, has annihilated the enemy's squadron and answered our hope. We appreciate deeply your splendid success."

VOLKERSAM SLAIN IN GREAT BATTLE

Special Cable to Boston American.

TOKIO, June 1.—Official reports from Admiral Togo now state that the Russian Admiral, Volkersam, reported captured, was killed in the great sea battle which resulted in the destruction of the Russian fleet.

There have been statements that Volkersam was taken, wounded, at the time Rojestvensky was captured. Latter this report was denied, and it was declared that Volkersam died three days previous to the big battle, a victim of cancer. To-day's report, however, seems to make it certain that he was slain in the fight.

Admiral Volkersam was one of the four Admirals with the Russian fleet when it closed with the Japanese in the Sea of Japan. The others were Rojestvensky, now a prisoner, badly wounded, and Nebogatoff and Enquist, also prisoners.

TOO EARLY FOR PEACE---TAKAHIRA

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Japanese Minister Takahira had a brief talk with the President to-day. On leaving the White House he said:

"All this peace talk is mere gossip. It is too early yet to talk peace. Russia must have time to think it over. When she has done so, then there may be some ground for peace. Now there is none."

TOGO TELLS HOW VOLKERSAM DIED

WASHINGTON, June 1.—The following dispatch, under date of Tokio, June 1, was given out at the Japan Legation this afternoon:

"Eighth report from Togo, received May 31: Commander Kasuga returned this afternoon with survivors of the Dimitri Donskoi. He reports that the Donskoi on the morning of May 29, opening her Kingston valve, sank, and those on board, including survivors from the Osliabia and the destroyer Bouinyi, landed on Ureiung Island. It appears that the Bouinyi took aboard Rojestvensky and staff before the sinking of the flagship on the afternoon of May 27, and also 200 from the Osliabia, but finding navigation difficult, transferred Rojestvensky and staff to Biedovy, and while running northward met on the morning of May 28 the Donskoi, to which all on board were transferred and Bouinyi sank herself.

"Osliabia, according to other survivors, had the conning tower struck at the first straight shot of the battle of May 27, and Admiral Voolkersham was killed, and after succession of shots sank about three in the afternoon.

"Survivors of the Donsklo say that they saw two destroyers sink in thick of battle at noon May 27; this, if true, makes five Russian destroyers sunk.'

TOGO AND DEWEY'S FACES COMPARED; SIMILARITY SHOWN

A study of the faces of Admiral Dewey, the hero of Manila Bay, and Vice-Admiral Togo, the greatest of the Japanese sea fighters, shows great similarity in contour of features from a physiognomist's point of view, tempered by the inevitable differences of individuality.

It is an interesting study because these men have won the two most momentous sea fights in history—battles which largely shape the destinies of Asia and have tremendous bearing upon the commercial and administrative future of all nations. Both Dewey and Togo have big, strong noses. Both are broad at the nostrils and have the same curve from the eyebrow. Dewey's nose is the more shapely and more inclined to be Roman. A big nose is supposed to show force of character and masterful spirit. If Togo's beard was shaved off, it would be found that, like Dewey's, his chin is broad and square at the base.

This feature is also indicative of strength of purpose and commanding will. A big nose with a convex curve above a broad, square chin indicates a man who is inflexible in purpose. He will both act and persevere. There is more difference in the eyes of Togo and Dewey than in other facial features. There is more space between the American's eyes. This is supposed to suggest more mental breadth. Togo's eyes, aside from their Oriental cast, are more expressive of cunning. He has shown marvellous craft as a strategist. The eyes of both beam with great intelligence.

TARBELL, FRICK CLASH ON EQUITABLE REPORT

FORMER CHARGES BAD FAITH IN THE PUBLICATION OF INVESTIGATION.

NEW YORK, June 1.—Gage E. Tarbell, second vice-president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, and Henry C. Frick, chairman of the Frick committee, whose report demands the resignations of Tarbell, President Alexander and Vice-President James H. Hyde, had a serious quarrel in Mr. Frick's private office to-day.

Mr. Tarbell accused one of the directors of the society with bad faith in giving out the contents of the secret report. He demanded a copy of the report and forced Mr. Frick to give him one.

The Frick investigating committee report was a great surprise, particularly to the Hyde faction, who expected it would be favorable to the young vice-president, deal severely with Tarbell and also score President Alexander to some extent. The investigators, however, not only arraigned Alexander, but made a terrible arraignment of Hyde, after going into all the charges against him within three months. He is criticized unsparingly.

President Alexander is charged with negligence in not discovering acts of misconduct in regard to the management of the society. It is said that Tarbell is accused of waste and extravagance in managing society agents and getting new business.

The character of the Frick report leads many to believe that E. H. Harriman and Jacob A. Schiff, who have been leaders of the Hyde faction, have deserted the young vice-president.

It is said that Harriman and Schiff are now leading a third element in the Equitable war, and that the fight has become three-cornered.

YASHIMA LOST IN 1904, JAPAN ADMITS

TOKIO, June 1.—The need for secrecy no longer existing, the Navy Department to-day acknowledges the reports of the loss of the Japanese battleship Yashima off Port Arthur in May, 1904, and announces other naval losses heretofore withheld. The list is as fololws:

Battleship Yashima, sunk by a mine May 15, 1904, while engaged in blockading Port Arthur.

The torpedo boat destroyer Akatsuki, sunk by a mine May 17, 1904, while taking part in the blockade of Port Arthur.

The gunboat Oshima, sunk in collision, May 17, 1904, while co-operating with the army off the Liaotung peninsula.

The torpedo boat destroyer Hayatori, sunk by mine, September 8, 1904, while taking part in the blockade of Port Arthur.

The gunboat Atago struck a rock and sank, November 6, 1904, while taking part in the blockade of Port Arthur.

The protected cruiser Takasago sunk by a mine, December 12, 1904, while taking part in the blockade of Port Arthur.

GALE BATTERED THE FLEUR DE LYS 3 DAYS

MISS STIMSON, ONLY WOMAN IN OCEAN RACE, DEEPLY DISAPPOINTED AT RESULT.

NEW YORK, June 1.—A copyrighted dispatch from Falmouth, England, printed to-day in the New York World, says:

"With sails torn and spars bent and broken, the little yacht Fleur de Lys came in before the wind, arriving here at 10:16 a. m. to-day, the seventh boat in the race across the Atlantic Ocean for the Kaiser's cup.

"On board this little vessel, owned by Lewis A. Stimson of the New York Yacht Club, was Miss Stimson, the daughter of the owner, the only woman who dared make the trying trip on one of the eleven racing yachts. Hard times has this young woman known since she sailed from New York Harbor, fourteen days ago, and started on a vessel which seemed a mere chip, to make this perilous trip.

Miss Stimson Disappointed.

"Miss Stimson, a seawoman from the soles of her small shoes to the crown of her seaman's cap, was on deck when the Fleur de Lys came into port here. A great ulster protected her from the cold wind. One of her first inquiries was: 'Where have we come in?'

"'Seventh,' she was told.

"Every one of the weatherbeaten seamen showed disappointment at the announcement, but Miss Stimson's disappointment was keenest. She had expected to outstrip the fleet Atlantic and all the others.

"Few women have ever known a rougher trip across the Atlantic than this daughter of Lewis A. Stimson. She is twenty-three years old and has seen all kinds of weather, rough and smooth. The boat has never made a trip that has racked her from stem to stern as has this trip.

"Her father told of the perilous voyage the Fleur de Lys had. He was on deck by the side of his daughter as he talked, and disappointment was in his tone.

Had Perilous Trip.

"He said he believed the boat was the only one that took the northern passage. In trying to avoid icebergs the schooner ran into a gale on May 26. The seas were so heavy that they swept the little craft from stem to stern and several of the sailors narrowly escaped being washed overboard. One of the schooner's lifeboats was smashed and sails were carried away. The helmsman had to be lashed to the wheel to prevent him being washed overboard.

"'This storm lasted for three days,' said Mr. Stimson, 'and never for an instant were we feeling that our lives were safe. The Fleur de Lys proved herself the stanch little boat she is by standing up against such a storm.'

"Captain Bohlin, the fisherman skipper, had no comment to make on the severity of the weather beyond the brief remark that 'it did blow some.'"

PRESIDENT TELLS ESTEEM FOR MORTON

WASHINGTON, June 1.—The following correspondence containing Secretary of the Navy Morton's letter of resignation and the President's acceptance of the same, was given out at the White House to-day:

May 31, 1905.

My Dear Mr. President:

I hereby tender my resignation as Secretary of the Navy and hope that you will accept it, to take effect July 1, 1905.

Business opportunities now present themselves to me which, in justice to myself and my family, I cannot fail to take advantage of. I have keenly enjoyed the work in the Navy Department, and I want to thank you for the great consideration you have always shown me. I shall always consider it a great honor to have been identified with your administration.

With assurances of my highest regard, I remain, very sincerely yours,

PAUL MORTON.

The President's reply is as follows:

White House, Washington, June 1, 1905.

My Dear Mr. Secretary:

In accepting your resignation, I wish to thank you for yielding to my wishes by remaining so long in the Cabinet. When I asked you to enter the public service I knew the sacrifice that it would entail, and you at that time stated positively that you could not remain in the Cabinet more than a few months, and would have to leave on March 4. I thank you for having, however, reluctantly agreed with me that it was your duty to round out an entire year of service.

Your leaving is a cause of sincere regret to every man interested in the United States Navy and I do not know an officer or man of that navy who fails to share in that regret. I cannot state too strongly my appreciation of the services you have rendered, or the high standard you have consistently maintained, and the way in which you have kept the navy, both in its personnel and material, up to the standard. Your work has been emphatically work for the entire nation; and I congratulate our people that they are able to get such a type of public servant.

With all good wishes for your future, believe me,

Faithfully yours,

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

WIFE-KILLER DEAD.

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., June 1.—Frederick L. Tomlinson, who murdered his wife and then shot himself, died this morning at the Bridgeport Hospital.

BRIGHTON MAN, LOST 5 DAYS, IS FOUND DEAD

John J. Kelly, a rich Brighton cattleman, missing since last Saturday from the Highland Spring sanitarium, at Nashua, N. H., has been found dead in a well on the premises of the sanitarium, say special dispatches to the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day. Previously, William A. Kelly, a brother of the dead man, had expressed a fear that his brother had met with foul play. An inquest will be held.

Search for the missing man had been kept up ever since Saturday. His relatives in Brighton insisted that every effort be made to find him. To-day the searchers found his body in the well. It had evidently been there several days.

Officials of the sanitarium declare that Kelly had been frequently despondent. It was necessary to keep a strict watch on him at such times. They now think that he escaped the attention of attendants on Saturday and made way with himself.

Mr. Kelly lived with his family at No. 32 Richardson street, Brighton. He was only thirty years old, but, despite his youth, had won a comfortable fortune in the cattle business. He was the owner of one of the largest abattoirs near Boston. He leaves several brothers and sisters.

MARY ROGERS TOLD OF NEW LEASE OF LIFE LATE THIS AFTERNOON

The Grim Destroyer Stayed Again.

Reprieve Which Again Stops the Hanging of Mary Rogers

Now, therefore, I, Charles J. Bell, Governor of the State of Vermont and by virtue of the power and authority vested in me by the constitution of the State of Vermont, do hereby further grant to and unto the said Mary M. Rogers a reprieve to and from the said sentence of death of said Court as above set forth to and until the 23d day of June, 1905, to and until between the hours of one and two o'clock in the afternoon of the said Friday, the 23d day of June, 1905, when and whereupon you shall in all respects execute and carry out the judgment and sentence of death of said Court as herein above set forth.

Given under my hand and the seal of the State of Vermont at Montpelier this first day of June, 1905.

(Signed) CHARLES J. BELL, Governor.

By the Governor,
CHARLES J. WALTER,
Secretary of Civil and Military Affairs.

Condemned Woman Expected Death on the Scaffold To-morrow Until Sheriff Peck Had the Official Reprieve of Governor Bell Read to Her To-day.

Special to the Boston American.

WINDSOR, Vt., June 1.—Mary Rogers has learned she has three weeks more at least to live. Sheriff Peck told her of the Governor's reprieve. She stood nervously drumming her fingers as she listened. "The Governor has granted you another reprieve for a short time," said the Sheriff. "I will be up later in the afternoon to read it to you and leave you a copy."

"I am very glad," she said. "I thank you very much, you almost always bring me good news. I hope you always will."

The Governor's reprieve bears date of mediately turned over to Sheriff Peck, and to-day, although he decided a couple of days ago to issue it. It was brought to Windsor this afternoon by Charles J. Walter, secretary to the Governor, who arrived here shortly after noon. It was late this afternoon Mrs. Rogers will know its contents.

Mr. Walter was met at the station by Superintendent Lovell, and was driven immediately to the State Prison, where Mary Rogers has been confined for so long. Immediately after seeing Mr. Peck, the Governor's secretary left town. Later this afternoon Attorney-General Fitz is expected here to look after the interests of the State in the noted case.

Following is the text of the reprieve:

"Now, therefore, I, Charles J. Bell, Governor of the State of Vermont, and by virtue of the power and authority vested in me by the Constitution of the State of Vermont, do hereby grant to and unto the said Mary M. Rogers, a reprieve to and from the said sentence of death of said court, as above set forth, to and until the twenty-third day of June, 1905, to and until between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock in the afternoon of the said Friday, the twenty-third day of June, 1905, when and whereupon you shall in all respects execute and carry out the judgment and sentence of death of said Court as herein above set forth.

"Given under my hand and the seal of the State of Vermont at Montpelier this, the first day of June, 1905.

"CHARLES J. BELL,
"Governor."

WOMAN EXPECTED TO DIE TO-MORROW

By J. Frank Davis.

WINDSOR, Vt., June 1.—Again Governor Bell has intervened to save the life of Mary Rogers, and again her lease of human existence has been extended, this time until June 23, but she does not know it.

Although it has been determined that she shall not hang for at least three weeks, and although each of the sheriff's seventeen deputies has been notified he need not attend the hanging, Mary Rogers supposes she is to die to-morrow.

As they had not told her her petition for a new trial had been refused or that an attempt was being made to file a writ of error to the highest court in the country, they have not yet told her that again Governor Bell has stepped in to reprieve her. The Governor, Attorney-General Fitts, Sheriff Peck and Prison Superintendent Lovell, were all agreed that it was best not to inform her until the reprieve itself, signed by the Governor, arrived at the prison and could be read to her.

In this the officials varied their former procedure, when they informed her of the action of the Governor as soon as he had told them by the telephone that the document was on its way to Windsor.

Peck to Get Reprieve.

It may be to-night before the condemned woman learns that her life is to be extended another period.

Attorney-General Fitts, who left Montpelier yesterday afternoon, telephoned from his home in Brattleboro late in the evening that he would receive the reprieve on a late train from the Governor. He said there was a possibility he might bring the paper to Windsor to-day, but if he did not Sheriff Peck was to come to Brattleboro and receive it from his hands.

Not until the sheriff has the reprieve in his possession will Mary Rogers be informed that the Governor has again interposed.

For the condemned woman, knowing nothing of what was going on outside her prison, yesterday was the second day before the date set for her hanging. She passed it as she has passed the other days of the week—quietly in the ward into which her cell opens. I saw her twice during the day sitting at the open window. The first time was at 7:30 o'clock in the morning; the second at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Her window was open, and only the heavy bars that grate all the windows of the prison were between us.

Good Looking Girl.

It is perhaps thirty feet from the asphalted walk where I stood to the wall of the prison, and she was looking from the third floor. Not a long distance, and in the light—especially in the morning—her face and figure, from the waist up, were as clearly outlined as though she were a picture in a frame.

Mary Rogers is a surprisingly good-looking girl. From some descriptions I had heard or read I had expected to see a woman of heavy face, hard features, unintelligent eyes. I saw a dark-haired girl, twenty-two years old, and looking not more than her age. Her features are regular, her hair dark brown, brushed back from her forehead and braided down her back.

She wore the dress of red calico that is prescribed as the garb of women prisoners. It added just the dash of color needed to add to the picture of the face in the barred frame, shaded by the overhanging branches of the jail yard elms.

When I saw her in the morning she was sewing quietly, her eyes on the needlework she held in her hand, her elbow on the sill of the open window.

Look on Beauties of Nature.

In the afternoon her hands lay idly in her lap, as though they held needlework or a book or a paper, but her eyes were looking out to the northward, and they wandered, as I watched, far out over the glorious panorama of Vermont in its most beautiful season.

She saw, directly before her eyes, the swaying branches, and through them the green of other trees, the broad stretch of the cool shaded road, the white of farm houses and cottage homes and the green fields beyond.

Still farther she saw the blue waters of Evart's Pond, with the glisten of the white birches and the upreating of the mountains reflecting in its depths. She saw the fields and the woods, and the slopes of the foot hills beyond and in the background of all she saw the great hills of Vermont, their serried edges forming a sky line that surrounded the picture as far as her eye could reach.

All this she saw in the shimmering sunlight of a Spring afternoon and it was very beautiful. Perhaps, as she looked, it came to her mind that for but two days more could she feast her eyes upon this glorious view, one of the most beautiful to be seen at this time in all New England. What more natural than that she feasted her eyes on the loveliness of fields and lake and mountains. She thought of how soon the sunlight was to be blotted out from her eyes forever, and her life come to an ignominious and disgraceful end.

Has Spoken of Execution.

It is said that Mary Rogers has never expressed entire repentance for her crime; that she has never seemed to realize the heinousness of the murder she and the half-witted half-breed, Perham, committed on the banks of the river at Bennington, when her husband was so cruelly and treacherously done to death.

It has been said that her intelligence has never seemed to comprehend the seriousness of the crime, but one could not live and not regret that the call of law was soon to hide so glorious a view as that she saw yesterday afternoon.

Perhaps that was why, as I chanced to be looking at her, Mary Rogers dropped her eyes from the splendid scene outside and fixed them on her lap. There they rested for a moment, as though she were thinking serious thoughts. Then, without another look from the open window, she passed out of sight into her room.

She has spoken of her approaching end but once since Sunday, when Father Delaney received her confession and administered holy communion. What she may have told the priest is locked as a secret in his heart. What she said thereafter was to Miss Durkee, the prison matron, on Tuesday.

ALVAH SANDERSON TAKEN TO VERMONT

Alvah Sanderson, arrested at No. 544 Columbus avenue as a fugitive from justice, on complaint of the Vermont officials that he had been furnishing opium and morphine to prisoners in the Vermont State Prison at Windsor, Vt., was delivered to Deputy Sheriff Richard F. Hoar of Windsor County, Vt., to be taken back to that State this afternoon.

Sanderson was arraigned before Judge Forsaith in Boston Municipal Court, where he was discharged from the complaint of being a fugitive from justice. He was immediately turned over to Deputy Hoar, however, on the new charge of furnishing the narcotics to the prison inmates. He made no plea in court, and, although represented by counsel, no effort was made to prevent his being taken out of the State.

Miss M. A. Raynard, daughter of the woman who conducts the lodging house at No. 554 Columbus avenue, where Sanderson lived and was arrested, says:

Surprise to Landlady.

"It was a complete surprise to us when the officer called and placed Mr. Sanderson under arrest. He had only been stopping with us since a week ago Monday. He was a quiet, modest and apparently refined young man, not more than twenty-four years of age, who had no bad habits and who spent his evenings in the company of four of the other lodgers who hailed from Windsor, Vt., and through whom he came to our house to lodge.

"He was not working, so far as I know, but went out every morning with the other young men who are employed, and has been looking for work. He never mentioned anything about himself to anybody in the house. Ralph Cluff, who has been a friend of Sanderson's for many years, was amazed when told about Sanderson's predicament and he declared that the charges must be false.

"He said that Sanderson had been an honest and upright fellow all his life, and that somebody must have made a mistake. The officers searched Sanderson's effects, but did not take them away."

According to special dispatches to the BOSTON AMERICAN, State's Attorney Charles Batchelder of Windsor County believes that he has unearthed a system of larceny, graft and the supplying of prisoners with drugs that will arouse the entire State of Vermont when all the facts are made public.

Chapter in Prison Scandal.

Sanderson left Windsor a week ago Monday, saying he would be away a week. The warrant for his arrest was to have been served upon his return, but when he did not arrive it was sent to Boston. This is another and more sensational chapter in the prison scandal, which started a couple of months ago, when the entire administration of the prison was changed and nearly every guard was discharged, Sanderson among them.

JURY AWARDS JILTED WOMAN $10,000 BALM

Miss Mary Wrynn Wins Suit Against Broker Downey of Providence.

PROVIDENCE, June 1.—A jury in the Common Pleas Division of the Supreme Court to-day awarded a verdict of $10,000 to Miss Mary W. Wrynn, housekeeper for Michael J. Downey, a prominent broker and saloonkeeper, in her suit for breach of promise.

Miss Wrynn testified that, although Downey had promised to marry her and had made her valuable presents, he married a Miss Donovan of Pawtucket, and went to Europe with her. She sued him for $30,000.

There is another action for breach of promise still pending against Downey, brought by Mary J. Fuller, formerly of Lynn, Mass., but now of Providence. Mrs. Fuller brought suit for $20,000 and had the writ served the day before Downey married Miss Donovan. He gave bonds to appear in court and brought an action against Mrs. Fuller for false arrest. These cases are still pending, and are scheduled for a hearing in October.

GREAT FLOOD RUSHING ON TEXAS CITY

One Town Destroyed by Rio Grande Overflow—El Paso Also in Danger.

EL PASO, Tex., June 1.—Lamesa, New Mexico, has been washed off the map by the breaking of a protecting dam in the Rio Grande river under pressure of the floods from combined melting of mountain snows and heavy rains.

The inhabitants had warning in time to save themselves, but all their property was lost.

Chamberline, farther down the river, has been inundated. The inhabitants fled, leaving their property behind. The water spreads over ten miles of territory.

The flood is rushing on toward this city, and every procurable laborer has been put to work building protecting dikes of sandbags. Great fear is felt that the Mexican portion of the town will be swept away. The houses are mostly of adobe, and will melt away like a sand pile.

BOSTON COUPLE WED AT CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, June 1.—A gay wedding party has gathered at Stoneleigh Court, where Miss Marion Robbins and Lawrence A. Jauney, both of Boston, will be married at 4 o'clock to-day. The arrival of Misses Gladys and Marion Lawson, two daughters of Thomas W. Lawson, completes the wedding party.

Miss Elinor Holbrook, of Springfield, Mass., is the bridesmaid. Elliott B. Robbins, a Harvard student and brother of the bride, will be best man. The bride will be given away by her mother, Mrs. Annette Beebe Robbins. Rev. Henry Hatch Dent Sterrett, of New York, a classmate at Harvard with the groom, will officiate.

After the wedding the couple will go on their honeymoon, and on their return will live in Boston, where Mr. Jauney practices as a patent lawyer.

BLAME FOG FOR LOST ARANSAS

The United States Board of Steamboat Inspectors place no blame in the accident in which the Joy Line steamer Aransas went down off Pollock Rip in collision with a barge in tow of the tug Patience. The investigation, while not finished, has proceeded to such a point that it can be said that neither captain will be found guilty of violating navigation regulations.

The entire blame is placed on the weather prevailing at the time of the accident. A dense fog enveloped the harbor at the time.

MISS CURTIS BEATEN AT GOLF

LONDON, June 1.—The fifth round of the international golf championship contest at Cromer opened to-day with two Americans still fighting gamely for championship honors. Miss Mary B. Adams of Boston, in this round, beat Miss N. Evans of Woolton by 6 up and 5 to play, thus reaching the sixth stage, but Miss Margaret Curtis of Massachusetts lost on the nineteenth green to Miss Thompson.

BABY'S AWFUL ITCHING ECZEMA

Sores All Over Face and Body—Could Not Tell What She Looked Like—Unable to Sleep—Grew Worse Under Doctors.

CURED BY CUTICURA IN ONE MONTH

A grateful mother, in the following letter, tells of another of those marvelous cures by Cuticura: "When my baby was four months old her skin broke out with a humor. I took her to a doctor, who said it was eczema. He gave me medicine to give her, but she kept getting worse all the time. Her little face and body were so covered with sores and large scales you could not tell what she looked like. No child ever had a worse case. Her face was being eaten away, and even her finger nails fell off. Then it itched so she could not sleep, and for many weary nights we could get no rest. At last we got Cuticura Soap and Ointment, first bathing her in warm water with the Soap, and then spreading on the Ointment with soft cloths. I saw a change in a week. The sores began to heal, and she could sleep at night, and in one month she had not one sore on her face or body. Any mother having children with eczema or humors will find a friend in Cuticura Soap and Ointment. (signed) Mrs. Mary Sanders, 709 Spring St., Camden, N.J., Aug. 14, 1904."

The foregoing statement justifies the oft-repeated assertion that Cuticura Soap and Ointment afford instant relief, and permit sleep for baby and rest for tired mothers, and points to a speedy, permanent, and economical cure, when all else fails, in the most torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, and pimply skin, and scalp humors.

Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills are sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, Sole Props. Send for "How to Cure Baby Humours."

WHITTIER TO BE TRIED TO-MORROW FOR THE DEATH OF HIS FORMER WIFE

VICTIM, SUSPECT, WEAPON, SCENE OF CRIME.

Lynn Man Who Found Mrs. Fuller's Body Is Charged With Manslaughter.

Special to the Boston American.

SALEM, June 1.—Seth K. Whittier of Lynn will go on trial on a charge of manslaughter in causing the death of his divorced wife, Mrs. Susan A. Fuller, at her home, No. 30 Ireson street, Lynn, when the Superior Court for Essex county opens here to-morrow, with Judge William Burnham Stevens presiding.

Whittier is alleged to have inflicted wounds upon Mrs. Fuller that resulted in her death on March 16, when she was found by Whittier in a room in the lodging house she kept in Lynn.

The peculiar circumstances surrounding the case led the police to believe that Whittier was implicated in her death and he was arrested and held for the May term of the Grand Jury. That body indicted him on a charge of manslaughter.

Mrs. Fuller's maiden name was Woods, and she was at one time one of the most beautiful women in Auburn, Me. When a girl she met Whittier, and in 1878 she married him. They moved from Auburn to Haverhill, where Whittier became a cutter in one of the big shoe factories. Their married life was apparently happy until late in the 80's, when Whittier is said to have taken to drinking. In 1891 his wife secured a divorce from him and he left Haverhill.

In 1895 Mrs. Fuller married her second husband, Jerome S. Fuller, clerk successively to Mayors Richards, Burnham and Brickett of Haverhill. He was found dead in bed in 1898, and then Mrs. Fuller left Haverhill for Lynn, where she established the lodging house on Ireson street.

She had not been proprietor of the boarding house long before Whittier heard of the death of her second husband, and went to Lynn. He was allowed to board at the house, and spent a great deal of his time in his former wife's company.

The couple had frequently been seen drinking, according to lodgers in the house. On March 8 Whittier went to Dr. Charles E. Jenkins, of No. 10 Ireson street, and asked him to visit Mrs. Fuller, saying she had been drinking for some time and was in a critical condition. The doctor called on the woman and prescribed for her. At the hearing in Police Court at Lynn he testified that he noticed wounds on the woman's head at the time.

Whittier Found Body.

It was about a week after the physician called that Whittier found his former wife's body on the bed in her room. The room was littered with whiskey bottles, old newspapers and other refuse. Whittier asked a lodger, Mrs. Mary Drew, to clear up the room. She did so with Mrs. Mary Ryan, another lodger.

Whittier did not notify the police of the finding of the body. It was through a lodger the police learned of the woman's death. The body was covered with bruises, according to Medical Examiner Pinkham, who made an autopsy. The head was cut, and one wound looked as though it had been made with a blunt hammer or heavy instrument.

It was this wound that caused death. Whittier said Mrs. Fuller had fallen against a window sash. The medical examiner said that the wound could not have been inflicted accidentally, that it was either caused by a kick or a blow. Upon this statement Chief Burckes of Lynn ordered Whittier arrested.

Jewelry Not Stolen.

None of the woman's jewelry was disturbed. Several rings were found on her fingers and diamond ear rings were in her ears. A gold watch she owned had been pawned, but the ticket for it was found. Whittier wore another watch owned by her, and said she had loaned it to him.

Whittier was arrested in a saloon while under the influence of liquor. He told a pretty straight story regarding his relations with the woman, which was later verified by the police. The prosecution claims that Mrs. Fuller received, in a drunken brawl, the wound on the head which resulted in her death.

TECH ALUMNI AGAINST THE MERGER 3 TO 1

Seventy-five Per Cent. of Votes Received Are Unfavorable to Alliance with Harvard.

PRITCHETT DISAPPOINTED

A count of the ballots of Tech alumni, voting on the matter of the merging of Tech and Harvard, revealed to-day that 75 per cent. of the alumni are irrevocably opposed to combining the two institutions. The ballots received were counted by Professor A. C. Robbins, secretary of the Tech Alumni Association, and he unofficially made this announcement to a brother professor.

Their are still many alumni to send in their votes, but the stand of the alumni has always been in opposition to the merging of Harvard with Tech, so the votes that remain to be heard from probably will not change the result in the least.

President Pritchett had hoped that a larger amount would favor the merger, as it is one of his pet ideas. He has worked hard to bring about an alliance between Harvard and Tech, and has not yet given up hope of success.

Professor Locke, President Pritchett and Professor Barton will address the members of the graduating class at their reception in the Institute Building to-morrow night. It is understood that the mooted question of the merger shall be avoided.

Monday will be class day, and Tuesday the alumni associations will have their receptions and dinners. Commencement will be June 8.

LOST FORTUNE; INHALED GAS

NEW LONDON, Ct., June 1.—Chauncey B. McCreery, aged forty-seven, formerly a passenger conductor on the Central Vermont railroad, committed suicide by inhaling gas in the basement kitchen of the Masonic Temple in this city. When he left home he told his family he was going to Providence. His body was found by Richard E. Sheldon, a member of Brainard Lodge, of which McCreery was a member. McCreery was injured on the railroad in a train collision and received large damages from the road a few years ago. He invested the money in steel stocks and lost it when those stocks depreciated. He was out of work and had become despondent.

SLAYER WADDELL WAS SEEN IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

MRS. JOHN FRED HAYES.

Sketched by a Boston American Staff Artist.

This is the woman who has been known in Beverley as Mrs. W. Foster Waddell, and who, since the murder of Hayes, of which Waddell is accused, has said she was the wife of the victim.

Said to Have Attempted Disguise by Cutting Off His Moustache.

Special to the Boston American.

BEVERLY, June 1.—The tragedy in which John Fred Hayes lost his life and which revealed the strange fact that he, and not the man who killed him, was the husband of the woman who was known as Mrs. W. Foster Waddell, has baffled the police, both as to a cause for the shooting and as to the whereabouts of the man wanted for the murder.

Behind this complication, which was told exclusively in the BOSTON AMERICAN yesterday, lies a romance of intense interest. It is the story of a man of good family, a temperance orator of great power and fine physical appearance, winning the love of a pretty Swedish girl and then, according to her story, of going through a mock marriage with her.

After living together for more than eight years the young woman found that she was not a wife, as Waddell had a wife living when they were married. They ended their relations then, although Waddell still called at the house occasionally. The woman, whose maiden name was Maria Charlotta Lindberg, still retained the name of Waddell.

May Be in New Hampshire.

Then she fell in love with Hayes, who boarded in the house, and on March 4, last, they went to Lynn and were married by the Rev. Roscoe L. Green, of the First Methodist Church.

Mrs. Hayes told Waddell that she and Hayes were married and Waddell promised to never bother her again. That was the status of things when the shooting took place last Friday evening. Mrs. Hayes says that she does not know what the motive of the shooting was, but it is declared that Hayes went into the room occupied by Waddell and found him in the act of setting fire to a sofa and that the fatal shots were fired immediately after that.

The police found two new clues to-day to the trail taken by Waddell and are working on them. They were to the effect that the man had been seen in both Portsmouth and Nashua, N. H. It is said that the fugitive has cut off his long mustache and has otherwise attempted to disguise himself. The funeral of Hayes was held yesterday at Farmington, N. H. Mrs. Hayes is with friends in this city. When seen by a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN she told this story of her life with Waddell:

"Frank Hayes was my husband, and Waddell ruined my life. I cannot yet grasp the full extent of the blows that have been delivered me.

"Ten years ago, when I was a young woman in Minnesota, Waddell and I met at a temperance convention. He was handsome, a fluent talker and swayed his audiences to enthusiasm as he pleaded for total abstinence.

"I was deeply impressed with him, and he was very attentive to me. My parents did not like him, but, girl-like, he seemed to me to be perfection.

"Finally he proposed marriage, and I accepted. We went to the city and a stranger to me, but a friend of his, went through what I supposed to be a legitimate marriage ceremony. I was happy and proud of my husband.

"He was good to me, too, but had a wild, turbulent temper. I was afraid of him, as his outbursts of fury were terrible. He was like a madman when aroused, but quickly subsided, and then always tried to atone for his lapse from propriety.

"We lived together in many cities—Winnipeg, Chicago, and elsewhere, and I worked hard with him and was his confidant.

Had Another Wife.

"But whenever I asked him to get our marriage certificate framed he always put me off, saying that he had left it with a friend.

"This continued until six years ago, when I was told by persons who knew him that he had a wife—a young German girl, whom he had deserted.

"I taxed him with it, but he indignantly denied it, told me not to believe slanderers, and that gossips always were vicious.

"I believed him and trusted him. But a year or so afterward, again I was told the same story, and this time my informant told me where the first wife was living. Waddell again denied it all.

"Then we came here. Eighteen months ago several people informed me that Waddell was a married man and that they knew all about his past.

"I told him there were too many reports to all be false, and he owned up.

"It was a terrible blow to have the man whom I had loved and toiled for, and to whom I had been a faithful wife, tell me that I had no claim upon him.

"My heart was almost broken. I could not realize it, and when I considered my predicament—discarded after eight and one-half years, I would have welcomed death.

"Then I told him that our association must cease, but that for his sake I would make another sacrifice—keep quiet.

"He agreed that we should part. We made a pact that we each should be free, and that neither ever should claim aught of the other.

"I opened the house here, and among my boarders was Hayes. He knew my story. I told it all to him. He felt bitterly toward Waddell, but I told him how exposure would only bring suffering to me.

"Our friendship grew into love, and on March 4 we went to Lynn and were quietly married.

"When we returned to Beverly, I told Waddell that I was now a legal wife. He congratulated me, but I did not thank him.

"He went on about his business, and exhibited no indication of anger or resentment at the man who had given me his name in accordance with the ordinance of God and the laws of man.

Borrowed Her Money.

"We were very happy, Frank and I, and for the first time in months I was beginning to feel like living. I had a husband who used me well, and I had high hopes. Waddell remained as a boarder, but my interest in him ceased with his board bill. He gave no trouble, and he had gone from my life months ago.

"I had every room rented, until that man killed Hayes, and tried to burn the boarding house, and now I have not a single one and am living with friends. Waddell came to me in March of last year and proposed that I buy his share in the furniture.

"Mind you, he did not own a cent's worth of it. I worked for it and bought it all. I told him that I would give it to him if he would clear out and never show his face about here again. He promised and I took out the money I lent him and gave him $100 in cash. In six weeks he had spent it all, was broke and came back for more.

"Since then he has been coming to the boarding house, sleeping on a cot in the hallway or in any vacant room, but never contributing a cent toward my support.

"Waddell had a row with Hayes, but it was over a year ago. He went into Hayes's room one day and threw the mail and writing paper on the floor. Hayes came in during the day and, seeing Waddell, said: 'I thank you for throwing my mail on the floor. I pay for my room and would thank you to let it alone.'

"Waddell hit him, knocking him down. I heard the noise and hurried down stairs and saw Waddell out in the front hall, kicking at Hayes, who was lying on the floor. He let Hayes up and then he went to the police for a warrant for Waddell's arrest, but I asked him, for my sake, not to, and he allowed the matter to drop."

Mrs. Hayes is an attractive woman in the thirties, and the neighbors all speak highly of her. She takes much interest in church work, and friends have tried to comfort her in her affliction.

BISHOP DECIDES LABOR DISPUTE FOR EMPLOYER

Providence Journeymen Carpenters Get Increase of 20 Cents Daily.

TIE VOTE WAS BROKEN

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, June 1.—Bishop William Neilson McVickar, chosen by the master builders and the journeymen carpenters of Providence to umpire a dispute over the question of wages, has rendered his decision in favor of the carpenters. The text of the decision was made public this morning.

After considering the cost of living, wage scales in other places and points submitted by the six other arbitrators, three to each side, the Bishop said:

"Your umpire has given careful consideration to each and all of these points, for and against the demand for an advanced scale of wages, and has come to the conclusion that the demand at the present time is not an unreasonable one, so far certainly as the arguments submitted are concerned. He is, therefore, constrained to side with the Carpenters' District Council in the matter and to grant their demand for 37½ cents per hour minimum rate."

The umpire's decision is final. It results in the proposed increase of twenty cents per day to the carpenters, who will hereafter receive $3 per day. The Providence master carpenters, who always follow the builders' lead, will fall into line. About 1,600 men in this city and Pawtucket are affected.

POLICE HERO; NAME UNKNOWN

Allston Man Tells How Patrolman Stopped Runaway and Probably Saved Lives.

Herbert R. Summer of No. 27 Haskell street, Allston, takes exception to recent remarks attributed to Captain O'Lalor of the East Dedham street police station, to the effect that some of the runaway stops made by Boston police were not so heroic and daring as the officers' friends would have the public believe. Captain O'Lalor was reported to have said that many of the runaways were not of the fiery, frantic order, but were comparatively easy for an able-bodied man to stop.

Mr. Summer sends this letter to the Police Commissioners:

"I feel it my duty to call to your attention an incident of the work-horse parade.

"My wife and myself were seated in one of a line of carriages on the left side of Beacon street, perhaps 200 feet from the horses' fountain near the Hotel Buckminster. We had our little girl of two years and our little boy of three upon our laps and we sat there some hours watching the parade.

"A heavy horse attached to a produce wagon became terrified by an automobile and started to run. The driver sat apparently dazed, seemingly unable to make a motion to stop him.

"Suddenly the horse swerved toward us. I could but sit there, apparently rivetted to my seat and helpless. An officer, who had been standing some distance away, ran toward the horse, seized the bridle and finally stopped him, but not until the point of one shaft was within two feet of my wife.

"That example of quickness of thought and action and concentration of strength gave to me as a citizen an appreciation of what true police protection is. There would have been certain loss of life or maiming of one or two little ones. I do not know the officer's name nor his number or his station, for his sergeant was quickly on the scene and relieved him."

MRS. HOWE GOES TO MAINE

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, the venerable author, has gone to Merry Thought Hall, near Gardiner, Maine, for a complete rest. Mrs. Howe was slightly overcome by the heat last Monday and this, together with the shock occasioned by the death of Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, who was a near friend, told on her.

Urged by friends, Mrs. Howe decided to visit her daughter, Mrs. John Richards, in Maine. Her condition is not alarming, as the cool weather of the past two days greatly revived her and she reached Maine in good spirits, although tired from the journey.

$12,500,000 FOR 13,000 ON CITY PAYROLLS

Official List of Suffolk County and City Employes Is Completed.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, $21,000

The official list of city and county employes, with their residences, occupation and salary, has been issued in accordance with the revised ordinances, and presents some interesting data for the taxpayers and the politicians. The list shows that 13,000 are on the pay rolls of city and county, the total pay roll drafts being over $12,500,000. The salaries range from $10,000 for the Mayor to 10 cents an hour paid the messengers in the Public Library. Then there are several unpaid boards, and in many instances the sum total of money expended cannot be accurately determined owing to the ratings of employes who receive a stipulated sum per hour, but the number of hours or days in the year they are employed is not given in the statistics.

$21,000 for Mayor's Office.

The list starts with the Mayor's office, the Mayor receiving $10,000, a private secretary $4,000, a chief clerk and consulting architect at $2,500 each, an assistant secretary at $1,500, and three assistants at $1,000 each. The members of the Board of Aldermen receive $1,500 each and their secretary $2,000. The seventy-five members of the Common Council receive $300 each, their clerk $3,500, an assistant $1,100, and a messenger $800.

The assessing department presents a long list, the chairman receiving $4,500, secretary $4,200 and seven principals $4,000 each, forty-four assistants receive $1,000 each, and forty-four second assistants who receive $6 per day when they are employed; the chief clerk receives $2,700 and his assistant $1,920, the conveyancing clerk $2,500, the bank and probate clerk $2,200, the engineer $1,900 and a host of office and street clerks who receive $6 per day.

Pianists in Bath Department.

The bath department presents a variety of help, including superintendents, physical director, instructors at the baths and gymnasiums, engineers, machinists, matrons, swimmers, boatmen, masseurs, pianists, chorewomen, repairers, coopers and others too numerous to mention. The general superintendent receives $2,200 and superintendents $3 per day, and salaries ranging to 50 cents per day to chorewomen.

In the cemetery department, in addition to gardeners, grave diggers and laborers, the list shows a ledgeman, marble rubber, mason, headstonesetter, moth exterminator and sexton, employed at $2 to $3 per day. The city clerk receives $5,000 and his assistants range from $3,800 down to $468.

The fire commissioner receives $5,000, the chief $3,500, the assistant chief $2,400, and ten district chiefs $2,000. Captains received $1,600, lieutenants $1,400, engineers $1,300, and hosemen from $1,200 down to $200 for substitutes. The chairman of the Board of Health receives $4,500, his two assistants $4,000 each, sanitary inspector $2,500 and assistants receive from $1,200 to $1,800. The milk inspector and bacteriologist receive $3,000 each.

Hundreds on Hospital Rolls.

The hospital department, employing hundreds, pays the superintendent $5,000 orderlies from $240 to $360 per year, the matron $1,200 and nurses range from $84 to $420.

The chairman of the Board of Police gets $5,000, the two other commissioners $4,500 each, the superintendent $4,025, two deputies $3,000 each, chief inspector $2,800, captains $2,500 and patrolmen from $1,200 to $1,000, with reserves at $2 and $2.25 a day.

The superintendent of schools receives $6,000, supervisors $3,780, chairman of the school house commission $4,000, headmasters of high schools $4,200 and $3,780, district masters $3,180 and assistants whose salaries range from $2,000 down to $1.50 per day for teachers.

The street department includes much and many, with a superintendent at $7,500 a year, a deputy bridge superintendent at $3,000 a year, a ferry superintendent at $3,000, a paving superintendent at $3,500, a sanitary superintendent at $3,000, and thousands of employes who get from $2 to $3 a day.

LOBLEY OWNS TO SWINDLING EQUITABLE

Pleads Guilty to Cheating Insurance Company Out of Nearly $85,000.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 1.—When his trial was resumed before Judge Crane in the County Court, Brooklyn, to-day, Samuel Lobley withdrew his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty to the charge of swindling the Equitable Life Assurance Society out of nearly $85,000. The case was about to go on when Lawyer George W. Martin said that, after a consultation, his client had concluded to plead guilty. Lobley then told of his connection with the swindle.

In reply to Judge Crane's questions he said he was thirty-nine years of age, born in New York City and was an engineer by profession. He said he had only been arrested once before, when he was sent to Sing Sing for ten years for stealing diamonds.

Clerk Broached Scheme.

For the past eight years, since he left prison, Lobley said that he had worked as an engineer in Brooklyn. He never had any connection with the Equitable company, but a clerk by the name of Emil Neumer called at his house with his nephew one day and told him of a scheme by which $1,000,000 could be secured from the Equitable. Neumer told him, Lobley said, that there were four other clerks in the Equitable that were mixed up in it.

"This was a year ago last May," Lobley told the Judge. "I thought it was a pipe dream until the following Tuesday, when he called at the house with a check for $27,816. All that I had to do was to cash the check. I did that. I kept $5,000 myself and gave Neumer $22,500 to be divided among the other clerks in the office who were in the scheme."

Tried It Three Times.

"How often did you work the scheme?" asked Judge Crane.

"Twice after that," answered the prisoner.

Lobley offered to make restitution, but somehow or other this plan fell through.

Lobley is going to keep all that he has of the proceeds of the robbery, so that he will have it when he finishes his term in the penitentiary.

BABY'S CRIES SAVED 15 LIVES AT FIRE; 4 HURT

ADELINE LOUISE MALONEY.

MRS EDITH MALONEY.

BABY WHO SAVED 15 LIVES.

Little Adeline Maloney, whose cries aroused fifteen persons who were in danger of losing their lives in fire, is shown in the above picture. Below is a picture of her mother.

A terrific explosion at a fire in Roxbury early to-day caused the wildest excitement for a time and badly injured four firemen. The explosion occured several minutes after the discovery of a fierce blaze in the two-story brick building at the corner of Washington street and Garfield place. But a few minutes before, fifteen persons living on the second floor of the building had made their escape. More than a score of firemen were in the building at the time, but all but four were remote from the scene of the explosion.

Captain William Gaffey of Engine 13, acting district chief, was on the stairway leading up from Garfield place to the second floor, and Edward Kilday of Chemical 12, Lieutenant George Twiss and William F. Quigley of Engine 23 were in the hallway, handling a line of hose, when a terrific explosion of hot air occurred. Gaffey was thrown down the stairs and Twiss, Quigley were hurled the length of the hallway. Immediately after the explosion the fire, which previously had been confined to the front of the building, burst through the roof in the rear, and the entire structure was in flames.

Rang Second Alarm.

Assistant Chief Hussey, fearing that many of his men were either killed or badly injured, at once ordered a second alarm. As soon as the firemen could get at their comrades they were rescued from the debris and carried into the street. All four were removed to the City Hospital in ambulances. They were badly burned and suffered from severe bruises and cuts. Kilday's condition, however, is regarded as serious. He suffered badly from the inhalation of flames. Captain Gaffey and Engineman Quigley were sent home after being treated, but Twiss was kept at the hospital.

The cries of two-year-old Adeline Maloney undoubtedly saved her parents and twelve lodgers from death in the flames. With her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Maloney, who keep the lodging house, she was asleep in a room in the middle part of the building. The cries of the little girl aroused her mother, who awoke to find the room full of smoke and the two adjoining rooms in front a mass of flames. She aroused her husband, who made his way to the other rooms and awoke the lodgers. Mrs. Maloney took her child in her arms and fought her way through the smoke and flames down the narrow stairway into Garfield place.

Unconscious from Smoke.

The lodgers who had not already left were rescued by the firemen. None had time to get clothing or other possessions and all were more or less overcome by smoke. Edward Callahan and his wife, who occupied a room in the rear, after being aroused by Mr. Maloney, tried to dress, but were overcome and dropped unconscious to the floor. They were carried out by firemen. They revived after being attended by a physician. The task of the inmates and the rescuers was made especially hard by the fact that the only means of egress was a narrow winding stairway. It was not more than two or three minutes after the last of the lodgers had left that the explosion took place. The roof was blown off, the floor burst through and buildings shook for blocks around.

The lodgers in the building, besides the Maloney family and Mr. and Mrs. Callahan, were George Donahue, Barnard J. Goldy, John Wentworth, Philip Harnett, Dennis Collins, Philip Malanson, Charles Joyce, Charles McKeon, George O'Donnell and Joseph P. McSweeny.

The loss on the building was about $2,500, and on the furnishings of the lodging house about $500. The cause of the fire is unknown.

DOCTOR ADVOCATED OPERATION—PE-RU-NA MADE IT UNNECESSARY.

We have on file thousands of testimonials like that of Mrs. Merald.

It is impossible here to give our readers more than a slight glimpse of the large number of testimonials Dr. Hartman is constantly receiving from grateful women who have been cured by his never-failing remedy, Peruna.

Enjoying Perfect Health—Thanks to Pe-ru-na.

Mrs. E. M. Merald, 128 W. 28th street, Indianapolis, Ind., member of A. D. Streight Circle of the Ladies of the G. A. R., writes:

"I am to-day enjoying perfect health, thanks to Peruna. Nearly four years ago I suffered with ovarian troubles. The doctor insisted on an operation as the only chance to get well, but I had always dreaded an operation and strongly objected.

SUFFERED FOUR YEARS

"My husband felt disheartened as well as I, and when a friendly druggist advised him to bring me a bottle of Peruna he did so, and I started to use it. In a short time my health began to increase, and my aches and pains diminished.

DRUGGIST ADVISED PE-RU-NA

"Within eighteen weeks I was like another being,—in splendid health. Words fail me when I try to tell you how glad and grateful I am."

How many times it happens that the doctor insists upon an operation.

The patient hesitates.

She writes to Dr. Hartman, or else some friend advises her to take Peruna.

She takes it.

She gets prompt relief.

She finally gets entirely cured.

Peruna has saved her from the pain and the expense, and possibly, the fatal termination of a surgical operation.

This has happened over and over.

It will happen many times more before the people come to understand fully the benefit of Peruna in such cases.

All correspondence is held strictly confidential. No letters are published without full consent of writer.

ASYLUM REPORT READY FOR THE PUBLIC SOON

Directors Say Investigation Has Been "Searching and So Far Satisfactory."

SILENCE STILL THEIR RULE

TAUNTON, June 1.—The investigation of the Taunton Insane Asylum, from which Grace Darby escaped, is being prosecuted with the most searching scrutiny, according to N. B. Borden of Fall River, chairman of the board of directors, and Loyed D. Chamberlain, a member of the board.

The report will probably be made public within a week. Neither of the directors mentioned would give any intimation as to what they have found so far as they have gone. To a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN Mr. Chamberlain said:

"We are getting at the truth regarding conditions existing in Taunton Insane Asylum. I think that inside of another week we shall be ready to give our report to the public, but not before next Thursday. I do not care to say what discoveries we have made, or what disclosures the investigation has brought about.

"This investigation was not made at the behest of any private individual, but to satisfy the relatives and friends of all the patients in the asylum who might have the slightest doubt as to how they are treated. e are getting along very well with it."

Mr. Borden said: "The investigation into the affairs of the Taunton Insane Asylum is not yet complete. We are working on it, and hope to conclude it soon. The board will hold another meeting next Thursday, but it is possible the investigation will not be concluded then. When it is complete, we shall make a report upon what conditions we found at the institution, and that report shall be given to the public.

"The investigation has been very searching, and so far very satisfactory. You may be sure the public will know its result."

SIX AUTO SPEEDERS ARE FINED $10 EACH

Fred L. Valtey of Lynn, Freeman C. White, George W. Norris and Harold Mitchell of Boston, Edgar Floyd of Brookline and David S. Goddard of Somerville, six well-known society youths, were fined $10 each by Judge Bruce in the Malden District Court to-day for speeding their automobiles beyond the legal limit. Sergeant West of the Metropolitan police saw six automobiles flying over the smooth Wellington boulevard on May 24, and he secured the numbers of the machines.

M'GRAW HAS LONG LIST OF WITNESSES

West just at the time the meeting was to be held. They were due to go West and would not have been of any assistance to either side. They know only of what happened between Mr. McGraw and Mr. Dreyfuss after the game on May 20. As I said before that incident is all settled. Only what happened after the game will follow to be brought up at the meeting. My decision on that ball field incident was final.

Thought McGraw Guilty.

"I have been abused by many newspaper writers of late. Many have said that Mr. Dreyfuss and myself paddled the same canoe. I have never been on the 'fine' with Mr. Dreyfuss. I did not impose this penalty on Mr. McGraw because Mr. Dreyfuss wished me to. I did it because I thought Mr. McGraw deserved it.

Clean Baseball Needed.

"Gentlemanly baseball is what must be played in the National League. While I am president no rowdyism will be allowed if I can help it. And I mean to help it, too. It has been stated by a number of prominent writers that Fred Clarke will call Mr. Brush the same names that did Mr. McGraw call Mr. Dreyfuss when the Giants play in Pittsburg next. If that is the case Mr. Clarke will get the same 'dose' as did Mr. McGraw—a fine of $150 and a suspension of fifteen days."

When President Pulliam was asked in regard to what he thought of Barney Dreyfuss paying "Bill" Clymer's fine, he said that it was not right. He was very sorry that Mr. Dreyfuss did it. "I was absolutely against my wishes; but as there is no rule in the National League to stop such an act, I could do nothing more than to do a lot of thinking.

"I am sorry that this trouble has ever happened, but I guess everything will come out all right."

Dreyfuss Has His Say.

Barney Dreyfuss, in discussing the case with a representative of the BOSTON AMERICAN, said: "I made the charges against McGraw solely in the interest of the national game, and I wasn't prompted by any personal motives, because I haven't any. I think it has come to a pretty pass when a manager can insult another in a public place with seeming impunity. I believe that abuse of this nature should be entirely suppressed, and I will be glad when a man will be fired out of the game forever if he makes any insinuations of crooked business or the like of that.

"McGraw called me about everything on the map, and I believe it was because of his anger at being put out of the game. I didn't put him out, and I don't see any reason why he should be angry on me, as I wasn't responsible for his ejection. It is said that I am mixed on the date when McGraw had words with me. That isn't right, as I remember distinctly it was on May 20.

Wagner Too Fresh.

"Hans Wagner, the shortstop of my team, put his hand up to his nose the other day when Umpire Johnstone made a decision, intimating that it was unfair. He was suspended for three days. I am glad he was, as I think it will teach him a lesson. Moreover, after the game, I gave him a good talking to, and I think that it did him a lot of good."

Cause of Trouble.

A few days ago Pulliam imposed a fine of $150 and a suspension of fifteen days upon John McGraw on the ground of improper language to Barney Dreyfuss of the Pirates.

The words which have precipitated all the trouble were: "You might as well get Dreyfuss to umpire," which were vented when Umpire Emslie made a decision which was not to the liking of the clever New York manager, during the recent series between the Giants and the Pirates.

McGraw has a long list of witnesses, who are sure they will vindicate him. They are Max Kramer, Marr Mullins, Tom O'Connell, a New York detective sergeant; Louis Mann, the actor, and Harry Stevens, the caterer at the Polo Grounds. Depositions have been received from Marshall P. Wilder, Arthur James, Charles Mathieson, Charles W. Murphy, Fred M. Knowles, James Cherry, Harry Desbong, Fred Barbier, Fred Wells and many others.

Petition for McGraw.

When the punishment was inflicted upon John McGraw, the fans raised a cry in his favor, and signed a petition some 12,000 strong in a single day. If they had a longer time the management said they could have easily have gotten the signatures of 100,000. The fans protest against the charge of rowdy ball playing which was heaped upon McGraw and seek his utter vindication.

Last year President Pulliam sent many complimentary letters to McGraw, complimenting him upon his suppression of profanity wherever he disputed any decision of umpires.

NATIONAL LEAGUE GROUNDS, Boston, June 1.—The coming of the Giants to the South End Park was a signal for a grand rush by the fans for another chance to gaze on the wonderful aggregation of ball tossers that McGraw has gotten together, which maintains its position at the head of the procession in spite of the opposition of the other seven teams.

Recognized as the hardest team in the league to beat, there was much wondering what the Hubbies would do against such a formidable galaxy of talent.

The fact that the New Yorks have been in the limelight lately for creating trouble on the ball field was another incentive for the gathering of the five ones to judge for themselves if any of the reports were true, and if the harsh expressions coming from certain quarters could be substantiated.

There was never any severe criticism on the way the Giants carried themselves in the field, and the fact that they were now at the head of the list might make some difference, as teams act according to the prestige they have.

Much during base running as the Giants exhibited was never seen, and it was a game of going down whenever a Gothamite reached the first bag. They brought some of their heavy swats along, which were likely to loom in any inning.

Christy Mathewson usually opens the fray when the Giants reach town to begin the series, and he was down to start as per program.

The big twirler is always a hard one for the Temperies to put on the shelf, but the fact remained that they had beaten him before and were willing to take chances with his delivery.

It was up to Jere Wilhelm to stagger the Giants with his pellets, and the wily pitcher was ready to assume the burden of the box work.

AMERICAN LEAGUE GROUNDS, New York, June 1.—Collins decided to put Big Bill Dinneen in the box this afternoon and hold Gibson over for a later game. The Boston captain figured that it was best to get the jump on Griffith's men at the start, as he thinks the New Yorks are pretty well demoralized.

The Boston men are now in fine shape and expect to take at least three out of the four games scheduled here. The day was cloudy and there were slight showers during the morning hours. The weather was warm.

Dougherty May Go.

There are many experts who expect to see a shake-up in the New York team in the near future. Anderson was yesterday said to Washington, and it is expected that "Pat" Dougherty will be the next to seek other fields to show his baseball skill.

Dougherty has not lived up to the reputation that preceded him to this city. In fact, his work has been a big disappointment, not only to local fans, but also to Manager Griffith. The little manager has got yes announced who he has got in Anderson's place, but he surely must have some player in view else Anderson would not have been shifted.

With Anderson out, Pultz will be played regularly in centre field, but this leaves the club without a substitute. Pultz, in short, is a much better man to the club than Anderson. He is faster in the field and on the bases and at the bat, but it will be impossible for him to make a better showing than Anderson has this season.

Old Infield Back.

The infield is once more intact, Elberfeld having recovered from the injuries that kept him out of the game for weeks. That Elberfeld's presence adds ginger to the nine was shown yesterday in the game in Philadelphia, when the Highlanders soundly trounced "Connie" Mack's pennant aspiring team.

It rained hard all the morning and there is some doubt whether the first game can be played. The champs want to get to work and hope it will clear in time.

The New Yorks have had a very disastrous Western trip, returning in last place. Clark Griffith is pretty crazy and his ravings upset the entire team. In the natural course of events, it ought to be easy for the Bostons to win every game. This would surely be the case in any other sport but baseball, but as every enthusiast knows, baseball cannot be doped out very accurately, and so the New Yorks may turn around and give the Champs a good beating.

Nevertheless, the Collins squad have away the best of it on paper and it is to be expected that they will be victorious in three out of four games.

Griffith Up in the Air.

As mentioned above, Griffith is up in the air. Readers of these dispatches will recall that I wired from St. Louis the fact that Griffith was seeking a deal whereby he could get rid of Pat Dougherty, the man he snapped up from Boston last year.

I mentioned at the time that Griffith would deny that he wanted to get rid of Pat, and I see by the New York newspapers that my story was read to him and he said:

"That comes from John I. Taylor. He wants to break up my team. There is not a word of truth in it."

I also understand from Tim Murnane, who joined the Boston team at Washington, that my dispatch from St. Louis, that Griffith wanted to drop Dougherty, caused a sensation in Boston. It was intimated that I had something against Pat and was trying to create trouble for him. This is not the case, and so far as the player is concerned, I have simply tried to tell the whys and wherefores as they developed.

Now, for the benefit of those who did not believe that Griffith was trying to trade Dougherty, I will state that he was offered to the Washington club on Tuesday. Griffith gave the Washington their choice of Dougherty and Anderson, and the Washington club chose Anderson. And I will state again that as soon as Griffith can make a satisfactory deal, Dougherty will quit the New York club.

We may not all agree with Griffith in his judgment. According to all reports, he is offering Powell for Howell. Before selling Anderson to the Washingtons he offered that player and Elberfeld for Boyle Stop Cassidy. The offer was declined, and then came the proposition to dispose of Anderson or Dougherty for a cash consideration.

The Boston players cannot understand what Griffith is driving at. He has a fine team, but it is evident that he has driven his players crazy.

From the point of view of an outsider, it would seem that the best thing Griffith could do would be to give himself a vacation and allow the New York team to run itself.

Such is the situation in the New York camp to-day and under the circumstances the Champs ought to have the best of the argument in the forthcoming series. But you can never tell.

WALSH WILL FIGHT NEIL AT DENVER

A championship battle between Jimmy Walsh and Frankie Neil of San Francisco will be held in August at Denver during the annual convention week of the Fraternal Order of Eagles. Billy Pierce, who will represent the Boston Aerie, is now negotiating the contest. It will be for the lightweight championship of America.

It is also probable that Sam Langford will participate in a fight during that week. It is Billy's intention to arrange a big carnival of bouts for three or four days of the week.

WILLIAMS WINS TENNIS HONORS

First honors in the intercollegiate tennis tournament went to the Williams racquet wielders this morning on the Longwood courts.

In team won the doubles championship, winning the final match from the Tufts pair in straight sets.

Williams's team was composed of Floyd R. Smith and Louis H. Northrop, and they duplicated their performance of last year, when they won from all other competitors.

The match, which was won by the score of 6-1, 6-0, 6-4, was really more interesting than the result shows, as the Tufts players, Wise and Hanscom, fought a game uphill match.

JOHN ANDERSON SOLD BY 'GRIFF' TO WASHINGTON

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, June 1.—Clark Griffith has sold John Anderson, outfielder of the Highlanders, to Washington. The price is not given out. Anderson's release is only the first of several more to follow, looking toward the rehabilitation of the New York Americans. Griff is after some new, live stock to strengthen his team, as he says he has a number of dead ones aboard now.

CRACK TRIO AT REVERE

Louis Mettling, Bobby Walthour and Jimmy Moran will have it out at the Revere track next Saturday night in a big paced race and the three-cornered scrap will bring out some lively tilts between the cracker jacks of the game.

Mettling won over Stinson and Caldwell twice this season and if he can win from Moran and Walthour he will be in line to race Hugh McLean for the highest honors of the track.

BASEBALL CHAMPS TO MEET GRIFF'S MEN BOXING WALSH TO BOX NEIL RACING AND ALL ATHLETICS

SHOWING HIM IN POSES FROM THE TIME HE CATCHES THE BALL UNTIL HE DELIVERS IT TO THE BATTER

Although he has only been playing major league baseball for some sixty days, Irving M. Young has achieved an enviable record. So well has he done for the Boston National League Club, of which he is the star member, that the triumvirate has given him a substantial boost in his salary. "Little Cy" Young, as he is known to the fans, came from the Concord Club of the New England League, where he established a record which augured well for the bigger leagues. Several clubs were after his services, but the Tenneyites "saw him first." Young's showing in the ranks of the "big fellows" is the most remarkable that can be recalled in recent years. He has been pitched against the strongest combinations in the National League, and has held his own against all comers. Many fans regard the New York Giants the strongest organization on the ball field, or at least Gotham fans do, and a twirler that can go to their grounds on a Saturday and win his game, 2 to 1, against a slab artist of the recognized sterling qualities of Christy Mathev son must indeed be a star. Not only did he do this, but in Boston, in a previous game, he did the fire-line work against the same team and lost a ten-inning game through a fluke. He has conquered the Pirates, Reds, Quakers and a host of other fast teams, and whipped them all in masterful fashion. He hasn't shown any wildness to date, and bears all the earmarks of an A1 man. He is a southpaw, with plenty of speed and curves, and a degree of control that in a new man is marvellous. Young promises to be every bit as successful as his famed namesake. These photographs were taken by a BOSTON AMERICAN camera expert at the South End grounds.

ARMY TO PLAY NAVY TEAM AT PRINCETON

PHILADELPHIA, June 1.—University of Pennsylvania athletic authorities are nettled at the navy football authorities for removing their annual game from Franklin Field and giving it to Princeton. The Pennsylvania authorities are the ones who secured the consent of the Government to the resumption of football relations between the two academies and gave them the use of Franklin Field and two-thirds of the tickets.

Until the proposition from Pennsylvania the Government refused its sanction. The real reason for transferring the game to Princeton was Pennsylvania's refusal to give the academies more tickets. Heretofore West Point and Annapolis have received 7,000 each and Pennsylvania a little over 6,000.

This year the academies asked for 1,000 more apiece, making 16,000 in all. This Pennsylvania declined to do, as the Red and Blue had to pay all the expenses of the game and received not one cent of revenue. Pennsylvania sold its allotment of the tickets and gave the entire proceeds to the homes for the orphans and widows of soldiers and sailors who perished in the Government service. This has netted the homes about $20,000 a year. Pennsylvania will make absolutely no complaint nor effort to retain the game.

HART SURE TO FIGHT ROOT

A special report from Reno, Nev., would indicate that Marvin Hart of Louisville, and Jack Root of Chicago, have accepted the terms of Al Livingston and Dan Egan for a finish fight to take place on July 2 in the open air at Reno, Nev. Livingston and Egan have posted a forfeit of $1,000 that they will pull off the fight.

O'BRIEN MAY MEET MORAN

NEW YORK, June 1.—"Tom" O'Rourke, manager of Owen Moran, the English bantamweight, has offered "Rouse" O'Brien, the Boston bantamweight, a purse to meet Moran for twenty rounds in private in this city in two weeks' time. Moran wants the weight 118 pounds at 3 p. m.

BIG CHALLENGE OF GARRYOWENS

At a largely attended meeting of the Garryowens, held at 26 Union Park street, it was decided to challenge any football club in Boston or vicinity for a match, June 17, for $100 a side. Any team wishing to accept the defi should address Manager M. C. Roche, 16 Sharon street, South End.

YALE'S VARSITY CREW IS NOT LIKELY TO BE AS FAST AS LAST YEAR'S CHAMPION EIGHT

NEW HAVEN, June 1.—The Yale varsity crew has not for six weeks enjoyed the undivided attention usually given to it, because the coaches have had to face the task of getting a second eight ready for the Annapolis race of June 7 and a freshman crew for the American Henley regatta.

It was originally calculated that these two features of the Yale rowing season would not interfere with the development of the varsity eight, at least as far as its speed is concerned, although it was known that the crew would be picked late this year. As a matter of fact the eight is not rowing in finished form, its speed is far from satisfactory, and its makeup is still unsettled to quite a degree.

It seems safe to predict now that the eight which meets Harvard on the Thames June 29 will not be capable of either such smooth or fast work as the one which rowed away from the Crimson oarsmen a year ago.

No alarm is felt at Yale at the condition of the crew, and no fear is shown that Yale may drop the big race, but the coaches realize that they have an unusually exacting task to smooth out all the defects in the eight between now and the race date, and to get the set of men into the shell who will balance it just right.

All the trouble seems to be on the starboard side of the boat. From the time practice began in the tank January 23 not a change has been made on the port side. It has rowed as follows and there is no sign now that it will go into the Harvard race made up in any other order:

Stroke, Whitney; No. 6, Captain Whittier; No. 4, Scott, and No. 2, Daly. These men are all veterans, Daly with three and Whittier with two years' experience. Whitney stroked the regulars last year in the cleanest of form and Scott was one of the most valuable men in the shell at No. 4.

Of the starboard side of the shell not a man can be predicted sure of his present seat. Weeks and Kincon, it seems safe to state, will be in the eight at New London next month, but on what bench it would be rash to state. Weeks has been rowing at bow all the spring and of the four places on this side of the shell this is the most nearly settled.

Weeks rowed No. 7 on his crack freshman crew two years ago and if the practice of the crew goes along merrily without the coaches finding anybody to set the stroke for the starboarders from No. 7 probably Weeks is a possibility to go back to that seat.

From the day practice began till a week ago Morse, who was No. 3 last year, was at No. 7. Doubt about his eligibility because of faculty complications led Coach John Kennedy to decide to try another man there, and Kincon was given the seat. Kincon has proved a hard, aggressive oar, but he has never before rowed in the varsity shell.

It is rare that an untried oarsman is given a seat at No. 7, and it is by no means certain that he will hold the seat, although he has rowed in three different positions in the shell this season, and is easily the best new man in the boat this year. Kincon started at No. 3 and remained there till about a month ago, when Chase left the shell. He was then moved up to No. 5 and was kept there till last week, when Morse's retirement caused his second promotion.

Morse Rowing No. 5 Now.

Morse is rowing No. 5 just now, but wherever he rows or whoever is picked for No. 5 in the big race, it will not be Morse. He weighs about 165 pounds, and is ten pounds too light for the seat. He is there because the right man for the bench has not been settled upon, and because the coaches have wished to try other candidates at No. 7, owing to the doubts which have existed about his eligibility. Now that these are cleared up, it is generally believed that he will go back to No. 7.

When Chase went out of the shell at No. 5 and Kincon replaced him, substitute Williams was called into the shell. He rowed No. 6 in the freshman boat a year ago. He has been tried at No. 3 for a month and, new to the starboard side, starts out well but gradually lapses into poor form and rather weak blade work. He was tried for a short time at No. 5, but his lack of experience was somewhat noticeable in that position and he went back toward the bow, where a fault is not copied by so many men.

What the trouble with Chase is is something of a mystery. When he went back out of the eight the rumor spread around the campus that he was suffering from heart trouble and would probably row no more. In spite of this he has kept in training and has worked regularly on one of the four-oared crews. The coaches deny that he is physically incapacitated and say that he may go back at No. 5. His trouble is not in his studies, it is declared. Chase was last year regarded as one of the most valuable oarsmen in the shell and when the faculty declared him ineligible the day before the crew went to New London it was regarded as a great loss.

Chase is physically a giant, weighing weighing 190 pounds, and is about the right type of an oarsman for the waist of the shell. Theoretically the shell should balance well with him at No. 5. Kincon, however, is rather heavy for No. 3, and yet he is too fine an oarsman to lose out of the shell. The coaches seem to be confronted with the dilemma of either having the shell balanced poorly or else of losing from the shell an oarsman superior to one seated to balance the boat. If the eight best men are picked the boat will not move on an even keel. If the boat is made to balance in the best of shape one not move on an even keel. If the boat is made to balance in the best of shape one of the good candidates for the starboard side may be relegated to the varsity four. The problem may yet work out satisfactorily before the departure of the eight to New London.

New Quarters Completed.

The crew will leave here for the Thames Wednesday, June 7, to remain in its usual home, at Gales Ferry, till the race, June 29. The new quarters given the oarsmen by Payne Whitney, captain of the '98 crew, are now completed and awaiting the arrival of the crews.

The problem of picking the varsity four which will meet Harvard is even more unsettled than that of selecting the varsity eight. Just now three fours are rowing, the same number into which all the varsity candidates were separated, outside of the regular eight, after the race with Annapolis. Two of the fours are evenly matched, and it is not yet settled which is to be regarded as the first. They are as follows:

No. 1—Stroke, De Freez; No. 3, Bloomer, No. 2, Bouscaren; bow, Blair.

No. 2—Stroke, Boulton; No. 3, Chase, No. 2, Ortmayer; bow, Atkins.

A series of races between the three will be held the coming week, at which the regular four will be selected, and four more of the candidates will be picked to go to New London as substitutes for either the varsity four or the varsity eight. It is expected that from the material Yale will have an excellent four on the Thames this year, although the Yale system is to give comparatively little attention to the four, making the varsity eight the centre of its planning. It is known that the freshman eight will be one of the strongest in Yale's history, and the result of its race at Philadelphia to-day is awaited with interest.

HARVARD VARSITY CREW IS FAR FROM BEING IN FORM

CREW:

The Harvard varsity crew seems to be in a most chaotic condition at the present time. Yesterday there was at least one change in every seat in the varsity boat except No. 5. There were a number of vital changes in the boat, but the most important was the placing of Ted Meier at 7 in the place of George and the return of Filley to stroke. These two changes may be permanent; the placing of Meier at 7 will undoubtedly be so. George was not in the final order of the boat. Two orders were tried in short spins before a third and final order for the day was picked. In this last order Filley stroked the boat, Meier was at 7, Bacon, who has been rowing in the four-oar, at 6, Lawson at 5, Newhall, the hockey captain, who has done practically no rowing this year, at 4, Burchard at 3, Farley of the four-oar at 2 and Flint at bow.

BASEBALL:

The present Harvard nine is acquiring a reputation as a hard-finishing team that is seldom enjoyed by Crimson nines. Yesterday's eighth inning finish was about the prettiest piece of pulling up from behind and passing the foe in the last stretch that has ever been seen on a Harvard field. The Dartmouth game was won in the eighth, when the game looked as good as presented to the enemy. The Cornell game was won in one inning after the Ithacans were ahead. Captain Randall's team has proven, and proved yesterday as never before, that it is never defeated until the last gun has been fired.

After Brown had scored two runs in the first half of the eighth on Dickinson's single and two bad errors by Coburn; after the Harvard pitcher had almost killed Elrod with a terrific blow on the head passing the Brown first baseman to the initial sack, things looked very bad indeed for Harvard. The Harvard bleachers had been cheering enthusiastically before, but at the beginning of the eighth, Orville Frantz, famous in Harvard two years ago as the most magnetic cheer leader that Harvard ever had, and also as a marvellous ball player, "Home Run" Frantz, as he was known, came to the front of the stand and began to lead the heretofore unorganized Harvard efforts.

Magnificent Cheering.

The result was as magnificent cheering as has ever been witnessed on Soldiers Field. McCarty led off for Harvard with a clean hit to centre that got away from Sweeney and was good for three bases. Paul Coburn, who has been hitting the ball hard recently, though a year ago he was the laughing stock of the University every time he came to the bat, hit the ball on the nose for a slashing single, scoring McCarty with Harvard's first run. Randall worked Tift for a pass and then the Brown pitcher made matters worse for himself by hitting Leonard and filling the bases. The pinch hitter, Matthews, came to the bat. He did not get a hit, but hit a hard grounder to Hoye. The latter stopped the ball, but threw wildly to the plate to catch Coburn, who was dashing home. The ball hit the big Harvard man and he was safe with the tying run. With the bases still full Stephenson drove a long fly to left field, Randall scoring Harvard's third run on the throw in. Dexter hit to Dickinson, who threw to first to catch the runner. Leonard made a dash for the plate from third on the plate and made his run easily, not even having to slide. This ended the scoring for Harvard as Greenough went out.

Brown tried hard in the ninth and might have done something had it not been for a bit of careless base running. With one out, Paine hit to left field and reached third base on a close decision. He had failed to touch first base in his circuit however, and was called out by Umpire Clarkson when Captain Randall claimed the misplay. Hamilton, the last man for Brown, drove a liner into Captain Randall's mit.

Paine's Fine Stick Work.

The star batting of the day was done by Paine of Brown, who got three of his team's five hits. Leonard got two for Harvard. The Crimson team made a total of six hits off the Brown twirler. Hugh Kernan made a catch of a high foul in left field that came near to making a record for achievements of this kind on the Harvard field. At the crack of the bat Kernan lowered his head and raced in the direction of the hit. He must have run fifty yards when, going at full speed in the same direction with the flying sphere, he reached out and pulled it down in a beautiful catch.

Paul Coburn pitched a good game. He gave Brown five hits, but did not pass a single man to first. He struck out seven of the Brunonians to four victims for Tift.

Notes of the Harness Horses

At the speed exhibitions at Readville horses stepped quarters in thirty seconds, timed officially by Frank B. Sulert, Dr. C. R. Wood and Georgie Bain.

The highest price paid for a horse at Readville was $3,500 for The Lookout, a brother of Bingen, 2:06¼, bought by Henry Titer, who developed and drove to his record the great son of Mary King and Young Mist.

* * *

The light harness season is now fully on. Races are trotted this week at Norfolk, Va., and Brandon, Manitoba.

Jack Trout, who changed the rgeat pacer Anaconder, 2:01¾, to a trotter and marked him in 2:08½, broke the Bingen four-year-old Henry M. Whitney, and declares that he will make a trotter whom everybody will be hunting up. Trout is a man of the Geers type, who is careful of mentioning an opinion, but when he does it usually checks out.

* * *

The classes for the Spring meeting at Dover, N. H., July 4 to 7, are 2:10, 2:13, 2:16, 2:19, 2:23 and 2:28 trotting and free for all, 2:08, 2:10, 2:12, 2:14, 2:17, 2:20 and 2:25 pacing.

* * *

Bingen stock is booming. George W. Leavitt has refused an offer of $5,000 for Achille from a Pittsburg man.

* * *

C. T. McNally of Groveton, N. H., who has three horses in the tented sale, at one time owned Sweet Marie. Three years ago he wintered at Los Angeles, and bought the now famous mare of the colored man who had purchased her of her breeder. The price was $400. He intended to send her East and breed her. He was induced to sell her for $600, and later offered $2,500 for her at the auction sale when Garland bid her off at $3,100.

* * *

Waldo Pierce of Arlington declares that Sweet Alcidalia, 2:10¼, has as much speed as ever. He is talking of breeding her to Nelson's Wilkes.

WHICH WILL MAKE THE BETTER HELPMATE? THE BUSINESS GIRL OR THE GIRL TRAINED AT HOME.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX Says That Neither Will Make a Good Wife Unless She Helps Her Husband to Success

SHE CAN'T REACH THE HARBOR UNLESS SHE HELPS HIM.

WHETHER her training school be the home or the office the girl who makes the best wife is the one who puts mind, as well as heart, into her duties.

A woman may have a heart full of love and willingness to be a good wife and yet not succeed in the highest sense of the word.

Love, of course, must be the foundation of a happy marriage, but there are other qualities also necessary to make the domestic machinery run smoothly.

The responsibility, of course, rests equally with both husband and wife, but it is the latter we are interested in just at present, so we will reserve the husband's faults and virtues for future dissection.

A good wife is the greatest blessing that falls to the lot of a man, and to be a good wife is the highest ambition a woman can set her heart on.

It is fine to be a good musician, a good painter, in fact to do anything well, but it is ten times better and finer to be a good wife.

Every girl spends much time dreaming of her future, wondering what her husband will be like, and when he will appear.

But I wonder does she ever stop to think how she is preparing herself for this unknown sovereign of her happiness whose throne she is to share.

Dear girls, I hope you will all be happy wives and mothers some day, and also that you will all be good wives, helpmates to the men who honor you by asking you to share their lives.

And let me tell you that no greater honor can be shown a woman than the offer of a good man's love and protection.

There are many ways in which you can fit yourselves to be good wives, and even should you never marry your efforts won't be wasted, for it is much better to be broad-minded, sweet-natured, intelligent old maids than narrow, peevish, ignorant ones.

Naturally every girl likes to have attention, to go to parties, theatres, etc.

But that isn't all of life, girls, it's the very smallest, least part of it.

Have your fun, but have it sensibly and moderately; don't imagine that there is nothing for you to do but play.

And don't let every man you meet make love to you. Enjoy the society of your men friends, dance with them, go to the theatre with them, but draw the line at familiarity.

Cultivate your mind, remember that you will have to hold your husband's interest and in order to do this you must be able to meet him on common ground in many ways.

Don't marry with the expectation that he will always be making love, for if you do you will be disappointed.

And if he forgets to kiss you good-by in the morning don't cry all day because he has ceased to love you. Make yourself so sweet when he comes home at night that there will be no chance of his neglecting his greeting kiss.

Don't enter matrimony with the idea that because you are a partner in the matrimonial business you can spend the firm's money recklessly.

Your husband will earn the money, your part in the business will be to help save it.

Make the home cheerful and don't invite guests whom you know your husband dislikes.

Make his interests yours. If he has any special interest, find out as much about the subject as you can, in order that you may be able to discuss it intelligently with him.

Don't nag at him or you will kill his love in no time.

You may think that all these directions can only be practiced after marriage.

But you can't change your whole nature in a minute, you know, and the only way to be all this later is to begin practicing it now.

Keep wide awake, take advantage of every opportunity that comes your way. If your temper is quick, try and learn self-control. If you are inclined to be extravagant practice economy.

Be dignified and gentle.

And if you can cultivate these qualities it will make not the slightest difference what your present occupation may be, you will make a good wife and happy will be the lucky man who wins you.

American Women Cannot Be Sylphs

By Eleanor Ames

No Longer Look to Paris for Styles, But Will Create Their Own

There's no use talking, American women cannot be sylphs.

They can't even walk like a sylph.

The National Dressmakers' Association has said so, and in every day parlance what the association says goes. Not long ago there was printed on this page a remarkable series of photographs.

They showed the new sylph figure and the new sylph walk, both of which originated in Paris.

Those photographs set every one talking.

"Must we come to this?" cried the women who seek to be fashionable.

Others drew their shades, locked their doors and tried to see how it was done.

Now women need no longer worry.

The sylph may flourish in Paris, but she will never be popular in America.

The other day talking to a hundred or more Chicago dressmakers, Mme. Linda Wade settled her fate. Mme. Linda Wade makes or breaks fashion's fads and fancies by her approval or censure.

She is authority on styles, and her word is law. She declares that "no self-respecting American woman will attempt to walk down the street like a ridiculous sylph."

Moreover, Mme. Wade startled her listeners by her independence. But as soon as they had recovered themselves they rallied to the call and delightfully supported her in the stand she had taken.

This is the result—American women will cease to copy their clothes from Paris models. They will create and let others follow their lead.

Instead of going to Paris for their gowns they will let their French sisters come to New York for theirs if any sartorial visits are to be paid.

"American fashions for American women," is henceforth to be the slogan. "The American woman is not built on the French plan. She cannot wear French gowns.

"We are just as fashionable as our Paris sisters.

"We may be different, but we are as well-dressed. We shall borrow no more styles.

"Instead we shall dictate styles to others."

That was the emancipation proclamation which those brave women signed. And "Glory be," ejaculate their sisters, who may have thought the same thing, but never dared say it.

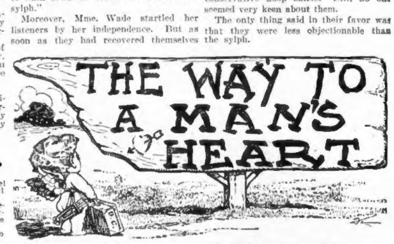

The sylph figure had one thing in its favor.

It killed all idea of the dread hoop skirt.

Now, will that wiry spectre rise and again confront the feminine world?

The dressmakers talked it over. They even had models, but they were not those hideous birdcage things which lie dust-covered in some attics. They were nice, conservative hoop skirts. Still no one seemed very keen about them.

The only thing said in their favor was that they were less objectionable than the sylph.

FRUIT MOUSSE

MASH one pound of fresh fruit through a fine strainer, mix with four tablespoonfuls of sugar and stir over the fire until the sugar is dissolved. Remove from the fire and add one tablespoonful of gelatin which has previously been dissolved in very little cold water. Stand on ice till thoroughly chilled. Mix two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and one teaspoonful of extract of vanilla with one quart of rich cream and whip thoroughly, adding a tablespoonful at a time of the chilled fruit juice, sweetened more if desired. Pour into a mould, cover very tightly and allow to ripen in ice and salt at least three hours.

Lobster Toast

Pick all the meat from two or three medium-sized lobsters, already boiled, and chop very fine. Work two or three tablespoonfuls of cream into one ounce of butter and add the lobster. Add also a few bits of chopped water cress and salt and pepper to taste. Have some slices of thin toast with crusts removed, spread with butter, put a portion of the lobster mixture on each slice, put bread crumbs mixed with melted butter over each slice, and brown in a hot oven.

Old-Fashioned Pound Cake

Twelve eggs, one pound of butter, one pound of sugar and three-fourths of a pound of flour. Beat the eggs separately until very light. Wash all salt from the butter and sift the flour into it a little at a time, creaming quite smooth. Beat the yolks of the eggs with the sugar, add the whites and beat together until very light. Add these to the flour and mix well. Season with one teaspoonful of lemon extract. Butter the pans and bake giving it time to rise as you would loaf bread.

Suet Pudding

One pound of suet chopped fine, one pound of stoned raisins, one pound of currants, one pound of brown sugar, one coffee cupful each of minced citron, lemon and orange peel, eight eggs, half of the whites, half a nutmeg grated, one teaspoonful of ginger. Beat the eggs first, then one-half pint of fresh milk, then beat both together, and by degrees stir in the flour. Roll the fruit, citron and the lemon and orange peel in flour, and add them, together with the suet and sugar, to the eggs and milk. Mix all thoroughly, adding more flour and milk if necessary. Boil five hours, or steam in a bag.

The Professor at the Beauty Table

DEAR PROFESSOR:
Kindly give me a remedy that will whiten and soften my hands, and also what is a good thing to use for enlarged pores? A. G. O.

A TABLESPOONFUL of glycerine thoroughly mixed with two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, to which one tablespoonful of almond oil is added a drop at a time, with ten drops of any good perfume that you may prefer, will give an excellent lotion for whitening and softening the skin of the hands. If glycerine does not agree with your skin use half the amount mentioned above.

Enlarged pores may be successfully treated by a nightly bath of equal parts of alcohol and rosewater.

DEAR PROFESSOR:
Will you kindly repeat the formula for the remedy known as Dr. Vaucaire's and oblige. C. G.

I TAKE pleasure in repeating for your benefit Dr. Vaucaire's remedy for flabby breasts. You may experience difficulty in having the formula put up because of the scarcity of one of the ingredients, the extract of galega, yet by persistent effort a druggist can be found who will be able to fill the prescription for you.

Simple syrup, 400 grams; lacto phosphate of lime, 10 grams; liquid extract of galega (goat's rue), 10 grams; tincture of fennel, 10 grams.

The dose is two soupspoonfuls with water before each meal, and the drinking of malt extracts during meals is recommended. The results are said to be very good.

DEAR PROFESSOR:
A long time ago I used one of your recipes for a dye, which was splendid, but it has been mislaid and I cannot find it. There were three ingredients and in using it I poured a little into a dish and diluted it with two parts of water and one of spirits. If you know what I refer to will you kindly repeat it? I am forty years old and my hair is quite gray. S. F.

THE dye to which you refer is doubtless the one I recommended to darken patches of gray hair and is composed of the following ingredients:

Pyrogallic acid, ¼ ounce; distilled water (hot), 1½ ounces. Dissolve and when cool add. Rectified spirits, ½ ounce. Dilute the mixture when using with twice its quantity of soft water and add a little rectified spirits; apply with a soft brush. It stains, of course, and the effect is gained by repeated applications.

SCARLET LIES By X and Z, Authors of "Married to Mystery"

THERE were times when the temptation to write and let her know that he was alive was so strong upon him that he actully sat down and wrote a letter; but it was only to tear up and clench his teeth in grim determination to go on with this thing to the bitter end.

It was better that she should believe him dead; better that she should not know the truth. In time, no doubt, she would forget him, and be glad that he had the courage to do the strong thing he had.

Perhaps—who knew?—in the days to come, at some far distant period, which just now was shrouded in the impenetrable mists of obscurity, they might meet again,

Meet as Strangers.

and he would hear her voice and see the lustre of her dear eyes once more.

Adrian Smith was young, and strong, and healthy. The world was before him; it was in his power to do what he chose with his life. Many a man before him had started afresh at his age and had wrenched a fortune and a good life out of the hands of fate. Why should not he?

Every day that passed gave him more and more confidence in himself. The days were endless, the nights prolonged suspense; but he kept his head, and never once, save on those few occasions when the thought of Mary Armstrong drove him to temporary weakness, did he turn his face from the hard path he had chosen—the path of renunciation.

At first he kept entirely to himself and stayed mostly in his room, going out at night to a little cafe at the back of the Palais Royal to read the papers and listen to the conversation of strangers. Once, indeed, he got something in the nature of a fright by meeting two men he knew—old college chums. He came upon them suddenly, face to face, in the Rue St. Honore. They stared at him, and he saw that they had noticed a likeness. He kept his visage and hurried on.

The incident had a salutary effect. He realized he must not frequent the well-known streets of Paris. He might meet a dozen people he knew at any moment, and, after all, as he examined himself in the mirror, his appearance was not so very much altered.

He had shaved off his moustache; that made a great alteration. Then, of course, he dressed very differently to the smart, immaculately attired and groomed Stephen Holland. He carefully avoided all eccentricities of attire, remembering the gray check suit. His clothes were common, ready made and ill-fitting. He wore a very low collar and a large Quartier Latin bow tie; he cultivated a stoop of the shoulders and a different walk—a slow, slouching gait; he wore glasses, and had started growing side-whiskers. But, for all this, it would have gone very badly with him had he met any one who knew him well.

After that

in the Rue St. Honore he elected to remain in his room at the hotel for a couple of days, feigning a bad cold. During those two days he came to several momentous decisions.

He did not want to leave Paris immediately, because in Paris he was as much in touch with every phase of news as if he had been in New York, and before starting off to some distant country to start the serious business of life he felt that he must know exactly how things turned out in America. But, if he was to stay in Paris, it must be in some more secluded part than his present quarters—some out-of-the-way suburb where he could pose as a student or an artist.

Then, again, he made up his mind that at the very earliest opportunity he would get abroad. Australia had always been his idea. Australia sounded strenuous, and conjured up visions of wealth and a future; besides, he knew the country and he liked it.

It was about ten days after he had been in Paris that he boldly set out to find new quarters. He chose two or three likely addresses from advertisements in the paper, and early one bright February morning set off to investigate them. Neuilly was his destination.

The Hotel Dominique, where he was staying, was in the Rue St. Marc, close to the Bourse. He turned the corner into the Rue Vivienne, and made his way with the crowds of clerks and stock brokers to the Boulevard Montmartre. It was at the corner of the boulevard and the Rue Vivienne that he received a very curious impression. He felt that he was being followed. The thought was disconcerting and unnerving; but he kept his course, turned to the left, and walked along the Boulevard.

The impression increased, and so got upon his mind that he stopped short, making the pretence of doing up his shoelace.

A man brushed past him—an American from all appearance. Stephen observed him closely, and received another poignant impression, which did not go far to alleviate his anxiety. He had seen the man before, and yet for the life of him he could not recall the occasion.

He was an undersized, stoutly built young man, with red hair, and wore a black bowler hat, a loose overcoat, with a velvet collar, tan gloves, and he carried an umbrella. His face was stolid, expressionless, and freckled; his eyes were pale gray blue, and he was clean shaven. Altogether the man was not striking. One might have seen him a dozen times without remembering him.

He walked on apparently unconcerned with Stephen; but about fifty feet away he stopped at a kiosk and bought a paper, and Stephen saw the man looking at him furtively. There was no mistaking it.

Stephen's heart was in his mouth, and for the first time he realized that he had allowed his nerves to go all to pieces; but, for all that, he kept his head, and, instead of continuing in the direction he had been going, he turned and retraced his steps to the corner of the Rue Vivienne. Then he turned sharply again, and met the red-haired man face to face.

He Had Followed Him, and, as they passed for the second time, Stephen caught a momentary glimpse of annoyance on the stolid, freckled face, and he heard, or he thought he heard, a muttered oath escape the man's lips.

"He's following me right enough," said Stephen to himself, "and he knows I know it. Now what's going to happen?"

All his nervousness had gone in a flash, and he was keen and alert as he always was in emergencies.

The red-haired man walked on. Stephen, without a moment's hesitation, followed him, and made no secret about it. The man glanced furtively over his shoulder and quickened his pace.

"He's a fool at the game," said Stephen.

The two men walked on for about a couple of hundred yards along the Boulevard Poissoniere; then, with another furtive look over his shoulder, the red-haired man hailed a passing voiture, jumped in, shouted some direction to the cocher and drove quickly away.

"So he's given it up," thought Stephen. "I wish I knew where he's off to now!"

But there was no possibility of that very reasonable wish being gratified. One thing, however, was morally certain. The red-haired man, whoever he was, had followed him from the Hotel Dominique. He knew therefore, that he was staying there. He would no doubt return, or some one else would. What, therefore, was the best thing to be done?

He had only one thought in his mind—the police. Evidently they had succeeded at last in following up the supposed murderer—that mysterious being in the gray check suit.

He had learnt nothing of the doings of the police from the papers of late. It was always that stereotyped phrase: "The police are in possession of a new clue which they are pursuing, so far, however, without any definite result."

What must he do? At all costs, he must throw them off his scent. To be arrested now—arrested for the murder of himself, and to have the whole farcical story of his deception made public! No, the very thought was intolerable. At all costs, he must Escape Them.

He hurried back to the hotel. He must get his luggage and pay his bill, and get away without a moment's loss of time.

In five minutes' time he was at the Hotel Dominique again. The seedy little hall porter met him with a surprised smile.

"It is fortunate that m'sieu has returned so soon," he said. "I did not expect m'sieu back yet. M'sieu told me he would not have dejeuner in the hotel."

"Well?" asked Stephen, trying hard to hide his anxiety.

"There is a gentleman here to see m'sieu," said the little hall porter.

"A gentleman here? Now?"

"Oui, m'sieu. He has been here five minutes."

"What is he waiting for?"

"He is writing, m'sieu a letter," said the hall porter; "but now I will tell him m'sieu have returned."

He darted away; but Stephen just managed to catch the tails of his coat.

"You won't do anything of the sort," he said. "Listen to me. What's the gentleman's name?"

"I don't know, m'sieu. When I told him you were out, he said he would write you a letter. So he is now in the correspondence room."

"Leave him there," said Stephen, giving the man half a louis. "Don't let him know I have returned. I shall be in my room. Bring the letter up to me as soon as the gentleman is gone."

"Oui, m'sieu—merci bein, m'sieu."

"And not a word about me. You understand?"

"Perfectly, m'sieu. Absolute secrecy. I understand."

Five minutes afterwards the man knocked at Stephen's bedroom door.

"The gentleman has gone, m'sieu," he said. "Here is the letter he has written."

Stephen snatched the letter from the porter's hand and eagerly scanned the handwriting on the envelope. It was a thin, spidery hand, almost like a woman's. The pen had been bad, the violet ink thick. The envelope was one of the hotel's. It was addressed: "Adrian Smith., Esq., Hotel Dominique, Paris," and was marked "Private."

"Where is the gentleman?" asked Stephen of the curious porter.

"The gentleman has gone, m'sieu," replied the man. "He said he would return in about two hours' time. He said it was most important that he should see you, m'sieu."

"Oh, he did?" said Stephen grimly. "Well, you know what I just told you, my man?"

"Certainly, m'sieu."

"Don't forget. I am not in the hotel until I give instructions to the contrary. Thank you, that is all for the present."

The porter retired. Stephen locked the door of his bedroom and tore open the letter.

"Dear Sir," it ran, "I am sorry to find you out, as I wanted rather particularly to see you. It seems, too, that I have only just missed you. If it is not encroaching too much on your valuable time, I should be exceedingly obliged if you could spare me a few minutes' conversation. I propose to call again at your hotel at 1 o'clock to-day, when, if you are unable to be in, I shall esteem it a great favor if you will kindly leave word with the hall porter when I can see you."

"What in the name of goodness does it all mean?" Stephen exclaimed. "And who is the man?"

He read on:

"You will not know my name, though I am well acquainted with yours, and heard of you quite accidentally the other day through my old friend, the Divinity Dean of Breakfast, whom I believe you met on a ferry in New York."

"Confound it all!" muttered Stephen. "Is this genuine, or is it some plan of the police? I'd give a lot to know."

There was nothing more in the letter. It concluded conventionally with: "Yours very truly, Roger Balshaw."

TO BE CONTINUED.

LATEST BELT OF CRUSHED KID

RULES FOR COLD BATHS

THE early morning cold bath is beneficial only to those persons who possess sufficient vital energy and nervous force to insure a good reaction with no subsequent langour or lassitude.

If one feels greatly refreshed after one's morning bath, but two or three hours afterwards feels tired or languid, there is sufficient evidence that the practice is injurious and should be discontinued.

Those who have an ample supply of blood and flesh, who possess a lymphatic or sluggish temperament and whose nervous force is not depleted may indulge in their morning bath to advantage.

Those inclined to be thin, whose hands and feet upon slight provocation become cold and clammy, who digest their food rather slowly and assimilate it with difficulty, who are nervous and are burdened mentally, all such individuals should avoid bathing during the early morning hours.

To all such persons a bath during the middle of the day or before retiring at night will prove of much greater advantage. The bath should be followed by rest of body and brain till equable conditions of circulation are re-established.

Then there is another class of persons—those who are weak in nervous power, but who have such excitable peripheral nerves that after a cool bath perfect reaction takes place at once, losing more, however, in after effects than gaining in the first place from the bath.

This class of individuals should not bathe too frequently, and when they do bathe should use tepid water; for these, before retiring is probably the best time to choose for the bath.

CARE OF BABY'S MOUTH

Many mothers do not recognize the fact that a baby's teeth should be cleaned, not only as soon as they arrive, but even long before—as soon as the baby itself arrives, in fact.

Many a little chubby face is kept scrupulously shining with cleanliness on the outside, but oh, dear! the poor little mouth! It is really much more important to keep the inside of a small child's mouth clean than the outside.

A dirty face may mar beauty, but it does not threaten health, and a neglected mouth does.

Young children, as soon as the first teeth appear, should be given little tooth brushes with very soft bristles, and should be taught to use them, and then watched to see that they do use them.

But as to the infants the toilet of the mouth must be performed for them, and should never be neglected. For this purpose a little wad of sterilized absorbent cotton should be used, and then thrown away, or, rather, burned.

When the baby has its bath the mouth should, as a matter of routine, be washed very gently with a pledget of cotton wet in a solution of boracic acid, or any other mild disinfecting liquid. If the little gums are soft and spongy and bleeding, dabbing them with tincture of myrrh will help them.

The reason for all this care is the same reason that makes the careful adult use his tooth brush scrupulously after each meal—namely, that harmful germs constantly exist in the mouths of all of us, even the healthiest, and babies, although they have no teeth, are no exception to this rule.

If their mouths are not kept clean, not only are the coming teeth jeopardized, but the child's general condition may be lowered by the constant presence in the mouth, and, consequently, the passage through the system, of health-injuring microbes.

In illness a small child's sufferings are often greatly aggravated by parching of the lips and tongue, and it is unable to tell what the trouble is.

The mouths of these little patients should be constantly refreshed and kept moist. This can be done with glycerine and water, and in many cases where constant drinking is forbidden by the physician, much suffering can be avoided by keeping the mouth moist and comfortable by some such simple means.

"DISGUISE?" SAYS LAFAYETTE, "A LIMP AND A MOUSTACHE WILL DO"

Sketched by Boston American Staff Photographer.

EXPERT MYSTIFIER AND CANINE ASSISTANT

The picture at the top is a sketch of Lafayette as himself; on the right is his impersonation of "Creatore" and below a photograph of "Beauty," his dog.

Master of "Self-Jugglery" at Keith's Says It's Easy to Fool Detectives if Careful.

"Stick on a little moustache and a limp and the best detective there is couldn't catch you in a lifetime if you are careful," says Lafayette.

He is at Keith's Theatre this week, where his two-part turn is mainly characterized by his art of juggling with himself. He appears, disappears, re-appears and anon vanishes again till the audience begins to blink. His facility in getting out of sight raises the natural question of how quickly a man expert in this specialty can escape police detection if he has committed any crime.

This proposition was put up to Lafayette to-day. He laughed.

"Easy Enough to Escape."

"I'm not committing any crimes these days," he said, "but I do think it would be very easy for a man to escape from a crowd or from a detective.

"Supposing I had committed a crime and just had time to get around the corner. If I had intended to commit that crime I would take a false moustache along with me. Let me stick that on my lip, put a little limp into my gait and I could pass ninety-nine people out of a hundred without fear of recognition. If I didn't have the moustache I might even get along with only the limp."

"Yes. If a man once gets out of sight there is no need of his being caught. Let him grow a beard or moustache. The eyes don't give any clue. You can't recognize a man by his eyes, except in most marked cases.

"Criminals Foolish."

"Once away a man should be able to live free from fear of detection. As a matter of fact, you know, a great many criminals who have been at large for several years get caught again through their own foolishness. They become intoxicated and let out something to somebody that gives a clue to their identity."

"You think a new beard is as good as being a different man."

"Why not?"

"How about a woman?"

"I think that's my call," said the Great Lafayette with a grin, darting to the wings.

MID-WEEK NEWS OF THE PLAYHOUSES

"Earl and the Girl" Continues in Popularity at the Boston.

SUMMER PRICES POPULAR

Boston Theatre.

"The Earl and the Girl" is now in the middle of the third week of its run at the Boston Theatre, and this musical comedy success seems to be gaining in prosperity right along. Next Monday evening comes the testimonial performance tendered by Manager McCarty and the Shubert brothers to William H. Walsh, press agent, and John Osborne, ticket agent, when one of the largest audiences of the season is looked for.

Hollis Street Theatre.

"On Satan's Mount," at the Hollis, has awakened a great deal of interest among local theatregoers. The fact that the dramatizer of the play and the authors of the novel upon which it is based are all Boston men, together with the popularity of the book, make its presentation of more than ordinary interest. It is finely acted and staged.

Tremont Theatre.

"The Prince of Pilsen" has come back to the town of its birth, and has been welcomed like the prodigal son. It seems just as attractive as when it was first given here, and its tuneful melodies and bright dialogue are just as enjoyable as they ever were. The company is clever and capable, and the chorus is an especially good one. And it is being given at Summer prices.

Keith's Theatre.

The Great Lafayette is mystifying big audiences at Keith's. He has a company of twenty persons, and is presenting one of the most remarkable acts ever seen in vaudeville. Then there are George Evans, the "Honey Boy," and a lot of other clever entertainers to keep him company.

Empire Theatre.

It is seldom that such a program is seen in a vaudeville theatre as is offered at the Empire this week. The bill is headed by Edgar L. Davenport, in "The Only Way," and the regard in which this actor is held in this city is being plainly shown. Billy Van, too, is a great feature.

Austin & Stone's Museum.

The Parisian Woman's Symphony Orchestra is proving one of the strongest attractions that has been put forward at Austin & Stone's Museum in ages. They render a varied series of selections and their playing is of a high order of excellence. There are many other good features and an entertaining vaudeville bill.

Howard Athenaeum.

Homer B. Mason, Marguerite Keeler and their company are making a hit at the Howard in "Hooked by Crook." Their act is one of the most genuinely entertaining that has been seen here in a long time, and there are many other features of the kind best appreciated by the patrons of the Howard.

Globe Theatre.

"York State Folks" continues its prosperous course at the Globe. With its excellent cast and fine production this popular rural play is now firmly established in Boston. A popular matinee will be given Saturday.

Castle Square Theatre.

"The Girl I Left Behind Me" is proving a popular attraction at the Castle Square Theatre. It is now over a dozen years since it was first presented, but it seems as well liked as ever. Next week, "David Garrick" and "The First Born."

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

"Red, White and Blue," is drawing large audiences to the Bowdoin Square Theatre and is being accorded every sign of approval. Next week's play will be "Crimes of a Great City."

Lyceum Theatre.

The Summer stock company is giving an enjoyable burlesque on "The Chimes of Normandy" this week. The olio, also, is an excellent one.

Palace Theatre.

One of the best bills yet offered by the Summer stock company at the Palace is that of this week. Both burlesques and olio are good.

Columbia Music Hall.

The new Henry Burlesquers are giving an entertaining bill at the Columbia. The burlesques are lively and the vaudeville section is composed of clever people.

Norumbega Park.

The season at Norumbega Park has started in very auspiciously. The attendance the opening day was the largest in the history of this resort and the fair weather yesterday drew another record-breaking crowd. The park this year is better provided with attractions than ever, and a fine vaudeville bill is offered in the theatre.

BE A QUEEN AND WEAR A CROWN.

A new feature for the girls, a cut-out mask of a queen, in all her regal splendor, will be introduced in next Sunday's HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN. It is unique and will please the little ones in your household.

30TH YEAR OF CHURCH.

Two hundred members of the congregation and guests celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of the founding of the Church of the Ascension, Episcopalian, East Cambridge, at a banquet in the vestry.

300 ATTACK LUMBER TEAMS IN CHICAGO

Police Chase Mob With Pistols For a Mile, But Fail to Capture.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, June 1.—Three hundred strike sympathizers, who attacked two wagons loaded with lumber in the lumber district on the South Side to-day, engaged in a running fight with the box guard on the wagons, and several shots were fired before the mob was finally beaten back. Then the police pursued the strike sympathizers for a mile, firing shots at them, in an effort to capture the leaders.

Policemen Harrington, Becker, Fitzpatrick and Whitney pursued one man who was especially prominent in the disturbance for several blocks. He escaped from them by jumping into the creek at Thirty-first street and Ashland avenue and swimming across.

The Grand Jury has begun to investigate the many reports of "graft" connected with the great teamsters' strike. Albert Young, former president of the teamsters, has declared that $30,000 was paid into the union treasury by employers who wanted to secure privileges from the unions.

The Grand Jury will also consider the alleged offer to President Shea of $10,000 if he would call off a strike which was on at Sears, Roebuck & Company two years ago.

The jury's inquiry will go deep into the whole subject. Albert Young predicts that after he has given his testimony several prominent business men whom he accuses of having shared in the graft scandal will leave the city or remain to face criminal prosecution.

"Some of these men who were so anxious for a Grand Jury investigation of the strike will be going South after I have testified," he said. "Why, I know of $30,000 being paid in strike benefits, not a cent of which came from the labor organizations. Who paid it? Let the Grand Jury ask me that. There are several other questions I want the Grand Jury to ask me."

TO LECTURE ON ST. FRANCIS D'ASSISSI

Edward Howard Griggs, the well-known lecturer, will give an appreciative lecture on the life and works of St. Francis d'Assissi next Sunday night at the People's Temple. The lecture will be free to all, and the pastor, the Rev. Charles A. Crane, invites the public.

Bleeding Ireland to Death

No War in the World's History Has Wronged a Country as the Smug, Complacent British Government Wrongs the Irish People

We print at the bottom of this column a letter written by Alice Stopford Green to the editor of the Westminster Gazette.

Mrs. Green is an Irish woman by birth—and above all by earnest sympathy and affection.

She is the widow of John R. Green, that great historian and noble man. She is herself a writer of great power, a most intelligent student of history.

We recommend to those who believe that the English Government treats Ireland fairly the plain statement of fact with which Mrs. John R. Green indicts the Government that destroys the Irish nation.

Ireland is the most wonderful, most forceful country in the history of the world.

In proportion to its size, it has contributed more to the intellectual life of this earth during the last ten centuries than any other nation—with the possible exception of the great French nation. And in proportion to its PROSPERITY it has done infinitely more for humanity than any other existing nation whatever.

This country of Ireland is fertile in genius, fertile as a land and as a race.

Yet the country is behind others in its birth rate, ahead of others in its death rate; it leads in the ranks of starvation—all because THE IRISH NATION IS BLED TO DEATH by the English Government, which really approves itself and thinks that it is doing well.

Think of the dreadful fact that every year for seven years FORTY THOUSAND YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN HAVE BEEN DRIVEN OUT OF IRELAND TO COUNTRIES THAT GIVE HUMAN BEINGS A CHANCE!

Read the dreadful figures which Mrs. Green presents so simply and so convincingly in her letter.

The marvel is that a nation even as fertile, as indestructible as the Irish nation, should be able to stand such persistent bleeding, such stealing away of its best blood.

The emigrants are nearly all young—that is what keeps down the Irish birth rate.

They are all patriotic, they will not stand the injustice of English rule, and that is why they go away to America, or to some other country where the English do not control.

It is a pretty sight which Mrs. Green presents to the imagination—the owners of a great English steamship company paying their agents one dollar and a half apiece for every Irishman that they send away from the Irish country.

The Irish nation is being bled to death, and a premium is put on every drop of loyal blood as it leaves the body of the mother country.

But in spite of this, the English Government, with its little concessions, its hypocritical pretence of fairness, is perfectly satisfied and wonders why complaints come from a land that is robbed of its youngest and best blood, as no land was ever robbed in the world's history by war, by famine, or by unjust government.

We are just sending a new Ambassador to London, a smooth and polite gentleman named Whitelaw Reid, who will take the place of that smoother and more polite corporation lawyer, Mr. Choate, who is coming back.

This newly appointed Ambassador, like all of our recent Ambassadors, will tell the English that theirs is the greatest and most noble of governments. He will tell them that "America does not sympathize with the Irish complaints," and the English will not even know that he is telling what is not true.

It is a pity that this country cannot send to England an honest, strong and sympathetic man, able to tell the English the truths that they ought to know about real American feeling, real American sympathy for the wonderful island that is being bled to death under a Government to which we send salaried flatterers.

THE ANSWER OF IRELAND

To Editor of the Westminster Gazette:

Sir—Last year the Irish, oppressed by the deepening chaos and hopelessness of the system of education in Ireland, saw the English Cabinet, at the bidding of the Orangemen, reject the idea of any amendment of higher education. With that disappeared all hope of amendment in the present shameful state of primary and secondary education.

Under orders of the Orangemen, the Government rejected proposals for certain judicious and necessary economies in the wasteful Irish administration—the savings to be added to the Irish development grant, for the benefit of Irish education or industries. The Irish development grant, it should be understood, is the sum given as an equivalent grant to Ireland of moneys allotted to English and Scotch education. But under the Land Purchase Act it has been diverted in large measure to the purposes of that act, in relieving the difficulty caused by the fall of value in consols. Much of it has been absorbed in this way, the effect on education being, of course, to this extent disastrous.

The answer of Ireland to this Ulster scheme of government has been immediate.

From its dwindling population it sent across the sea to the United States 4,000 more young men and women in the first three months of this year than had gone in the flight of last year.

In this month of May the Cunard Company, according to reports in Irish papers, assembled at a great luncheon in Cork over 200 of its emigration agents from Leinster, Munster and Connaught. The agents, according to the accounts, receive from the company 6s. for every emigrant they bring to the ship. They had been successful, but the chairman of the banquet and general manager of the company was not satisfied with this rate of expatriation of the Irish. He still hopes to double it, with the help of this government. "There is no payment," he said also, the Government rejected proposals for certain judicious and necessary economies in the wasteful Irish administration—the savings to be added to the Irish development grant, for the benefit of Irish education or industries. The Irish development grant, it should be understood, is the sum given as an equivalent grant to Ireland of moneys allotted to English and Scotch education. A pamphlet written by Mr. McCann with greater pleasure than the concession to our agents, and you could not delight us more than by making us pay you twice as much as at present."

It may appeal more to Englishmen to remember that every one of these emigrants buys not a great more of British manufactures.

A dozen Orange members meanwhile defy the Government to concern itself either with reform of education or economy for Irish industries, and the English Parliament is content to have it so. I am, yours faithfully,

ALICE STOPFORD GREEN.

WANTS THE PEOPLE TO DECIDE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

While our government is said to be a representative government, a government by the people, it is far from it; the people do not rule.

So long as the people depend upon the honesty of men in the administration of government, government will be a failure. Can't you see it? Can't everyone see it?

What we people want is to vote on each question ourselves. Don't depend on the dishonest Senators. Give us a chance to vote on each important question: How quickly we will settle the parcels post question, the immigration question and the question of government ownership of public utilities!

Have a simple way to vote and an election every six months or oftener, to vote on all the more important questions of the day.

Let the BOSTON AMERICAN call for plans of such a government and the best way to attain it. Then what we want is a leader and a well-planned method of campaign, and volunteers will come in by the million.

Let us have government by the people.

1. MRS. SNOOKS—What's this? A letter to John from that Tom Lushington—"Dear John, come down to the house to-night. Wife is out of town. When the cat is away the mice can play. We are going to have a darn time!" WELL, I'll just put my foot down on THAT.

2. MRS. SNOOKS—Here's an invitation from that friend of yours, Tom Lushington. Read it. But I warn you, John, you go to no "WARM TIME" this night, my boy.

MR. SNOOKS (reading—aside)—Heavens! I CAN'T miss this.

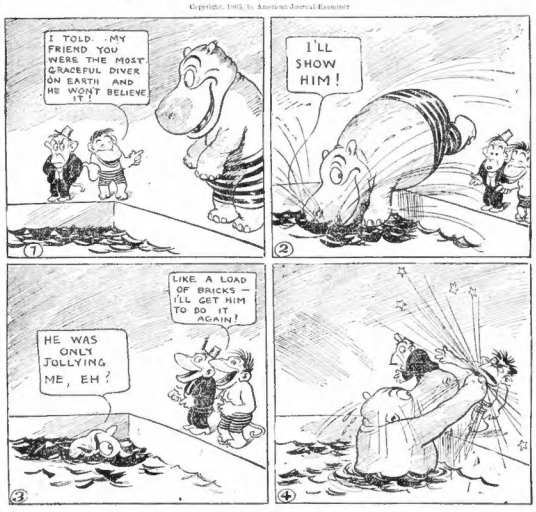

3. MR. SNOOKS (thinking quickly)—Well, I just guess NOT. No "warm times" for me to-night, my dear, when I've got to meet Colonel Smith and go over with him the prospectus for that new gold mining company we contemplate forming.

4. MRS. SNOOKS—Oh, John, how proud I am that MY husband is not one who idles away his time, but is one whose every movement is devoted to his financial advancement. Don't figure on that prospectus too hard, John. Good-night, dear.

MR. SNOOKS (aside)—Say, it's as easy it's a shame.

The Plunge Wasn't Graceful, but—Oh, My!

What May We Eat or Drink with Safety

By Rev. Albert E. George

EVERY now and then our feelings receive a shock about what we should eat or drink. Coffee and tea are under the ban, not to say a word about tobacco and alcohol.

Tea has again received a recent exposure at the hands of an English physician of some repute. He terms the tea habit one of "the most subtle, insinuating and injurious of all habits, and does more harm in England than alcohol."

It is said cheap teas contain the most tannin and will take the enamel off the cups as well as turn meat into the leather.

This same physician declares: "To be saturated with tea, to be constantly under its influence, to be dependent on it, is to be tea drunk.

In Boston a week ago a demonstration was made of the effect of tobacco upon the human system and how it played havoc with the inferior orders of creation when brought in contact with it.

Even water must be boiled and treated before it is fit to drink. We know how largely water enters into the commonest food. An ordinary loaf of bread contains nearly forty per cent. of water.

Morning milk from the cow contains more water than the evening milk. How far the cow is responsible for this it may be hard to decide.

We are getting considerable advice in these days, what not to drink. We look back and examine what the Aryans lived upon. These old fellows had no chemists to make them nervous. They took the soma or moon plant, which was a strong drink, though it twisted them when under its influence.

Has the time come for a new beverage? We are living in tainted times. Tainted money, tainted coal out in Chicago, tainted everything wherever we look. All this, too, with the proverbial peck of dirt we eat during our lifetime.

Verily, we are in a bad plight. Amid the multitude of counsellors who are discoursing about what we eat or drink the best thing is to take your chances.

When you sit down to eat remember Mr. Gladstone's thirty-two bites. As you taste your coffee, remember that the Massachusetts State Board of Health found specimens of coffee five per cent. adulterated, and then pause and think of your heart. Think of typhoid germs in the water, and of the fresh eggs you have eaten, containing sixty per cent. of water, and the quart of milk eighty per cent. of water.

You will be miserable, if you think of all this. Everything is tainted or has a filler. So find the drink which appeals to your taste and does not destroy your manhood. If you begin to dwell upon what you hear lurks in common beverages, you will grow morbid.

Keep up your health by plenty of fresh air and play no tricks with your digestion. When you get too fond of anything, know it is time to stop and make an exchange. This is a good rule for the generality of people.

To heed all that has lately been said against common beverages and about your body, is unnerving. "Your feet are not mates," says one. The two sides of a person's face are never alike. The right eye, as a rule, is higher than the left. In fifty-four cases out of a hundred the left leg is shorter than the right. The nails of two fingers never grow with the same rapidity, and so on.

We are really sickening of this distressing information. Is there any one who will say a good word for the human food and human body?

The only way to have a friend is to be one.

May the Warships of Brave Togo Set the Russian People Free

By Wm. H. Ross

WHEN the battle line was broken and the hulks were filled with dead,
When a white flag fluttered reluctant 'gainst a sunrise sky of red,
And the cable flashed the tidings that the mighty Battle Fleet
Had met the Nippon squadron and had crumbled in defeat,
Two Russian ships fled northward with colors furled in fright—
Thirty-six of them had entered, and but two survived the fight.

"Port Arthur's long surrendered, the garrison in rout,
The Nippons climbed the ramparts and swept the last redoubt."
Too late the Baltic squadron, flying 'cross the Chinese Sea—
A foeman's guns are mounted in the port it sailed to free!
For months the Czar's brave legions held the enemy at bay,
For months up heights infernal the brave Japs fought their way.

On hillsides where the tide of war rose to its crimson flood
The wavering lines of conflict were mapped by lines of blood;
Rent by shell and racked with famine, trapped in a charnel pit,
Still the Russians flew their colors o'er the funeral pyres they lit;
Still ever forging onward, where Mikado pennants led,
His cohorts captured Mukden by trampling on their dead.

And so they fought and famished for flag and fatherland,
Died in stockchoid and on rampart, at long range, hand-to-hand,
Until the world was sickened and prayed that war might cease,
That having shown their valor, they would offer hands in peace;
For stolid moujiks on the plain and Japs upon the sea
Have each and all in battle proved as brave as men can be.

Let Japan gain the right to grow in people and in power;
May Russia reap from cruel war the richest earthly dower;
May its masses, dumb for ages, no longer bend the knee—
May the warships of brave Togo set the Russian people free!

He is a wise man who wastes no energy on pursuits for which he is not fitted.—GLADSTONE.

A WOMAN WHO DOESN'T LIKE CANDY

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Did it ever occur to the people of Boston, or, in fact, to those of any other city or town, that in past years and at the present time they are subjecting themselves to all kinds of disease by taking into their systems a vast amount of germs in the form of confectionery eating? Disease lurks in candies that are piled in heaps on counters and in windows, with no coverings of any kind, open to the dust of their surroundings and the accumulations of the streets outside.

Take this matter into consideration during the hot summer season. Physicians claim that disease has its origin in germs. Then why not remedy this matter and lessen sickness and possibly the death rate of this city. A glance around certain stores will convince any one that what I say is true, and it will be readily seen what a large field these germs have in which to grow.

I asked about the floor above— The story overhead.

"Oh, that," said he—"why, that's another story."
